About the Great Fight There Have Been Greater Man Adores Brutality The Smallpox Spot

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

Tomorrow the great day. Ninety thousand will watch, one hundred millions, more or less, will read of the great fight.

Thousands that would not "walk across the street" to visit New York's Metropolitan Museum, or Washington's Congressional Library will travel across the continent, and across the ocean, to see two men fighting in a primitive fashion that went out of date on the day that the bow and arrow were invented.

Mr. Corbett will be there. Mr. Battling Nelson, Mike Gibbons and Tom Gibbons. Six Senators at least will attend in one group. The Governor of New Jersey will entertain. This humble writer will endeavor to describe the historic scene simply, for future ages?

And finally Mr. Tex Rickard will have in his box "the whole Roosevelt family, including three ladies" —at least so the announcement reads.

That will be a welcome sight to the great Roosevelt as he sits above, surrounded by heavenly hosts, smiling, showing his strong teeth to the seraphim and cherubim. He will say to those celestial personages: "See that prize fight? That's my family. Red blood there."

It is difficult to suggest comfort for those 99,910,000 that must miss the fight. This writer can assure them, however, that they have missed better fights than tomorrow's fight. For instance, consider the last fight reported by this writer for Charles A. Dana between John L. Sullivan and Charley Mitchell, thirty odd years ago, on Baron Rothschild's training quarters near Chantilly in France.

The men fought with bare fists, soaked in walnut juice to harden the skin. They fought on muddy, bare ground in a cold, drizzling rain in mid-Winter. They had long, sharp spikes in their shoes to grip the mud. Once Mitchell drove his spikes into Sullivan's instep, perhaps accidentally. And Sullivan uttered his famous remark of mingled rebuke and self restraint, "He a gentleman, Charley, if you can, you——"

No crowd and no gate receipts at that real fight. It was fought under London prize ring rules, each round lasting until one man went down, with at least one knee on the ground. There was no Roosevelt family there, no Miss Anne Morgan, no Laurette Taylor, no Billie Burke, not a Senator, or Governor. But it was interesting.

Billy Porter, distinguished and patriotic American bank burglar, who had killed two or three men, and fled to England, and subsequently died a convict in the German salt mines, stood just outside the ropes in John L. Sullivan's corner.

He was neatly dressed, silk hat, beautiful overcoat with velvet collar and big pockets. Both hands were in his pockets. Before the fight began he tilted his hands upward and two ugly little round points stuck up inside the cloth.

"I am here to see fair play for Sullivan," said Porter. "I suppose you Mitchell men know what I have got in my pockets?"

The Mitchell men, first class thugs and carefully chosen, knew well that Porter had his two "guns" and would use them. They, behaved nicely, abandoning their plan to break into the ring, if things went badly for Mitchell.

Those details from the ancient past let you know that you have missed fights more romantic than the fight of tomorrow.

How the heart of savage, uncivilized brutal man responds to brutality. All Rome poured out to see gladiators murder each other, or to see religious questions settled by throwing the heretics to wild beasts.

The rabble poured out from the city and ran along the roadside hooting, as the noblest soul ever born on earth was mourned, toward the hill called Golgotha, meaning the skull, there to be murdered.

And later, in His name, crowds poured out to see one kind of Christian burned alive by some other kind of Christian, and Jews burned by both kinds of Christians.

A hundred men are in a hurry. Not one will stop to see what is the crying child. But the 100 will stop to see two boys fight, or watch a terrier tear a rat set free from a cage.

The names that everybody knows are fighting names, from Alexander to Foch. The monuments in the parks, the world over, are fighting monuments.

And tomorrow 50,000 human beings will go out to see a prize fight. And each, with a delightful lack of any sense of humor, will beatifically announce himself or herself "intelligent and civilized."

We are barbarians, with a veneer of culture so thin that you can't see it, and the Dempsey-Carpentier fight proves it.

But don't worry about the fight, worry rather about yourself if the fight interests you. When a man breaks out in spots of a certain kind, that means smallpox. Not the spots, but the meaning. The SMALLPOX is important. Tomorrow's fight is nothing, what it means is a good deal.

In one way it is encouraging for you may hopelessly ask "if the human race has achieved such wonders while still in a state of barbarism, what will it not achieve in millions of years of real civilization that are ahead of it?"

RECOVERY ENDS 3-DAY SEARCH

Body of Miss Joyce Discovered Floating in Pool Near North Attleboro

North Attleboro, July 1.—The body of Miss Eva Joyce, thirty-four years old, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Joyce of Washington street, was discovered by searching parties in Turnpike Pond, four miles from her home here, today.

She had been missing since Monday, when she left a sick bed and wandered into the woods.

Scores of residents, including two troops of Boy Scouts and three bloodhounds, have been searching for her since Tuesday, but without finding a trace of her movements.

The body was found by Charles Bachelier, leader of one of the searching parties. It was floating in the pond not far from the foot of a steep embankment which forms one shore of the pond.

The medical examiner, to whom the body was turned over, in investigating in an effort to learn whether Miss Joyce fell over the embankment or deliberately threw herself into the water.

The young woman has been mentally sick for some time. Last Fall she ran away from home and was found in the woods after four days of searching.

STILLMAN GAVE $300,000 FUND FOR 'FLO'

Attorney Charges Banker Set Aside Huge Sum for Show Girl and Baby

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 1.—Through the ranking cross-fire of interrogations levelled at James E. Stillman on the witness stand in the divorce suit, John E. Mack revealed for the first time that the financier had established a trust fund of $150,000 for Florence H. Leeds and another of $150,000 for Baby Jay Leeds, the show girl's child.

The records of the New York Trust Company were subpoenaed to show the existence of the Accounts and representatives of the corporation testified to the accuracy of the records.

But Stillman point-blank refused to answer all questions regarding the funds, pleading that it would "tend to incriminate him in a crime."

DE VALERA COUNTER CHARGES GRIFFITH EXPECTED

Appalling Total of Casualties in Ireland From January to July

Dublin, July 1.—Nearly 1,000 persons were killed in Ireland from January 1 up to Monday, according to an official casualty list issued here. The victims are listed as follows:

	Killed	Wounded
Civilians	642	606
Crown forces	352	516

London, July 1.—Released from Mountjoy prison today after having been held many months in jail without charges being preferred against them, Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sein Fein, and Professor John MacNeill are in consultation with President de Valera regarding the invitation of Premier Lloyd George to a conference in London.

Immediately after their release Griffith and MacNeill hastened to the Mansion House, Dublin, where they met the Irish leader.

Aldorman Staines and E. J. Duggan, members of the Dail Eireann, were also released from Mountjoy by the British authorities on orders from Downing Street. The object of the Crown authorities, it is declared, is to facilitate discussion of the peace question.

All of the released Sinn Feiners are expected to take part in De Valera's Dublin conference next Monday. Their release is apparently unconditional, regardless of the outcome of the peace talk, and it is regarded here as a sign of the earnest efforts of Lloyd George to accomplish a settlement.

The Premier, however, does not agree with De Valera's contention that the question should be settled on Irish soil, but believes that all parties will benefit by getting away from the hectic atmosphere of Ireland.

The government is relying on the Southern Unionists to induce De Valera to come to London, despite the refusal of Sir James Craig to attend a preliminary meeting in Dublin.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S REPLY SUBMITTED TO JUSTICE RUGG FOR APPROVAL

District Attorney Tufts' formal answer to the charges of Attorney-General Allen is ready.

It will be submitted to Chief Justice Rugg at Worcester today and may be filed with the clerk of the State Supreme Court within a few hours. While no official information as to what the document contains will be given out until it is filed, it is rumored sensational allegations and counter-charges may be found in its eight and one-half typewritten pages.

Attorney David Greer, associate counsel for Tufts, appeared at the Suffolk County Courthouse today with the answer.

When told that Chief Justice Rugg was in Worcester, he stated he would send the document to him by messenger.

The Chief Justice must approve the answer before it is filed.

COLLECTOR LUFKIN ASSUMES OFFICE

Wilfred W. Lufkin, the new collector of the port, took formal charge of his office at the Custom House today immediately after taking the oath of office, administered by Judge Morton of the Federal Court.

Mr. Lufkin was cheered by the 666 employes of the Custom House when he announced that "not a man or woman in this office need worry a single moment about dismissal or demotion so long as he or she does the work for which they have been sworn into office."

DENIES NEGLIGENCE IN AUTO COLLISION

'BIG FOUR' MAY ACCEPT CUT IN WAGES

Chicago, July 1.—First indication that the "Big Four" Brotherhoods would accept the railway wage cuts, thus averting a nation-wide strike on rail lines, was given here today by H. M. Daugherty, vice-grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He indicated the brotherhoods might "informally" accept the wage reductions.

Daugherty declared, however, that if the "get-together" session of leaders of the sixteen "big" rail unions here today voted against acceptance, the reductions would be put up to a "referendum" in the "Big Four" —

3 BANDITS FLEE FROM CARVING KNIVES

Two kitchen men, armed with carving knives, foiled an attempted holdup in the restaurant of Costas Coulos at No. 25 Kneeland street, today and chased William Daumont, one of the alleged robbers, into the arms of a policeman.

Jeremiah Gibson of New York and Caspar Miller of Bangor, Me., were later arrested in Park square charged with being involved in the attempt.

Three men entered the Coulos restaurant and ordered steaks. When the proprietor presented the check they demanded his money. When one of them hit him he yelled, and his trusty aides responded.

Daumont, Gibson and Miller were held in $2,000 each for the Grand Jury.

Policeman Fights Mad Dog in the Dark

A furious fight in the dark with a mad dog was waged today by Policeman Asa J. Darsney of the Lynn police, in an effort to save Michael Curtin, a watchman employed by the J. S. Barnet Company, Boston street, Lynn.

Darsney responded to a telephone call from Curtin, who had been alarmed by the behavior of a large mongrel dog which had followed him about on his rounds for half an hour.

He found Curtin backed into a doorway fighting hard to fend off the leaps of the maddened animal.

As Darsney turned a corner the dog saw him, and leaving Curtin leaped straight at the officer's throat. In the dark the sudden attack got home and the fangs of the dog tore the policeman's uniform and scratched his face and hands.

Before he could draw his revolver the dog had bitten him again on the right leg just above the knee, inflicting a long ugly gash.

Then Darsney got out his gun and fired two shots.

He is being given the Pasteur anti-toxin treatment for hydrophobia. Curtin is unharmed.

Record-Breaking Crowd to See Bout—Big Hotels All Jammed

By International News Service

New York, July 1.—The seat sale for the Dempsey-Carpentier bout tomorrow had reached $1,250,000 at 1 o'clock this afternoon, Promoter Tex Rickard announced. He added that he expected the sale to mount to $1,500,000 by noon tomorrow.

Francois Descamps, manager of Carpentier, told Rickard today that he expected the French challenger to win from Dempsey by a knockout in five rounds.

Betting odds on Dempsey slumped today from 4 and 3 to 1 to 2½ to 1. The slump is believed due to the report that the champion is losing weight worrying over his unpopularity. There is still plenty of money being put up on Dempsey, however, but there are few takers.

EDWARDS PLAYS CRAFTS.

Governor Edwards of New Jersey today scored Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, in announcing that he would not reply to Crafts' letter, asking him to prevent the fight.

"The letter is the work of a meddling fanatic," he said, "and I will not answer it or pay any attention to it whatsoever."

AMERICAN WINS BELATED AID FOR 43 DISABLED VETERANS

HOSPITAL INMATES HELPED

Newspaper's Representative Gets Disability Compensation for 22 Soldiers

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Through the co-operation of the Boston American with the Bureau of War Risk Insurance forty-three disabled soldiers in contract hospitals in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts have become the recipients of belated justice.

Of this number twenty-two have received total disability rating, either permanent or temporary, some carrying awards of $180 and others of $80 a month. These men have been receiving hospital care and treatment for long periods, but had not been receiving any money for themselves or their dependents from the government.

For months soldier organizations and newspapers have heard stories of the neglect of these men in the contract hospitals in Oxford Springs, Me., Gorham, N. H., and Groton, Mass. Appeals have been made to local offices of the War Risk Bureau and to the central office of the bureau at Washington.

NEWSPAPER MAN ACTS.

The Boston American decided that something more than appeals and criticisms were necessary to bring action and, accordingly, a member of the staff was assigned to make a thorough survey of the situation and report his findings to Colonel Charles H. Forbes, director of the War Risk Bureau.

A startling array of facts was gathered by the Boston American representative and submitted to the director. It was learned that there were 285 disabled soldier patients in the three hospitals and that of that number forty-five were without compensation.

Most all the men had made application for compensation. For many weary months they received no answer. Some of them have never received more than a mere acknowledgement of their letters. Others were informed that their affidavits until they became dizzy and discouraged.

THANKS BOSTON AMERICAN.

Director Forbes gave up an entire afternoon going over the facts with the representative of the Boston American and then decided to send a claim adjuster to the hospitals to make a special examination of the claimants and their claim papers.

The bureau official and the Boston American representative left Washington together and, upon arriving in Boston, spent a day at the Chandler home in Jamaica Plain, until recently a contract hospital for convalescents, before making the rounds of the other institutions. A few doubtful cases at the home were considered but they do not figure in this story.

Ideal Weather for Fight Promised

Washington, July 1.—Ideal conditions for the Dempsey-Carpentier battle at Jersey City Saturday are promised by the Weather Bureau.

"Last minute observations indicate that Dame Nature is a fight fan," said Chief Forecaster Mitchell. "It will be fair, and not very hot, probably between 73 and 90 degrees with relatively little humidity. That's a whole lot better than at the Dempsey-Willard battle at Toledo, when the mercury soared to nearly 100, with a high percentage of humidity.

"And besides it looks as though there will be a fairly good breeze. It may dawn cloudy tomorrow, but that needn't worry the fight fans—it will clear in a few hours and stay clear until after the battle."

blessed a futile struggle will be presaid.

CAN SEAT 91,612.

The gigantic amphitheatre which Tex Rickard has erected in designs to have a seating capacity of 91,612. It was fairly certain today that that vast arena will be filled to overflowing.

Hoon Hageway James, Australia, Francis Reginald Shann, South American and from every State in the United Fight fans have made their way here to witness the struggle between champion of Europe and the conqueror of Jess Willard.

Every train that arrived in New York today brought scores more who want to be present in Boyle's Thirty Acres tomorrow.

Many of them have their tickets. Many others have not, but hope to get the coveted pasteboards when the scalper waits are placed on sale early tomorrow morning.

Every hotel within a radius of fifty miles of Jersey City has been crowded all rooms engaged for tonight. Judging from the steady stream of arrivals today, there will be hundreds many who will have difficulty in finding places to sleep.

The principals in tomorrow's struggle were in seclusion today. The champion was preparing to make his getaway from Atlantic City. He will do only the lightest kind of work today, simply to loosen up his muscles. He plans to spend tonight at the home of a friend in Jersey City. He will retire to his room early and no longer men being barred. He will do light exercising up services tomorrow morning and then probably take a nap while waiting for the hour to go to the Arena.

Carpentier, at Manhasset, was even in more seclusion than Dempsey.

All advance seats were drawn at his cottage last night and no one was permitted even to make any inquiries regarding his condition. It is not known definitely when he will go to Jersey City. One report had it that he will make the trip tomorrow on the private yacht of one of his admirers. This could not be confirmed.

BETTING LIGHT.

Betting continued light. The odds range from 2 to 1 to 2 to 1.

Fifth Street Heights, Brooklyn, that had $1,000 to bet against $8,000 that Dempsey will win by a knockout or on the referee's decision, and $2,000 that he will win by a knockout in the second round; $1,000 against $2,000 that he will win in the third by a knockout; $1,000 against $2,000 that he will win in the fourth round by a knockout, and $5,000 even money that Dempsey wins in the fifth by a knockout.

Several houses reported having Carpentier money, odds of 1 to 3 being demanded. It was said that Dempsey backers were holding out for 2 to 1.

The last move of the Reform League to stop the fight was made today when its complaint will be presented to the Hudson County grand jury.

Promoter Rickard was not worrying this morning. He indicated his belief that the grand jury would not take any action. Under this circumstance he stated that he will not make any recommendations in the matter, but will simply file the complaint with the Grand Jury.

PROMINENT BOX HOLDERS.

Governor Edwards has handed down his last word, which was to the effect that there would be no interferences with the fight.

Boarder office has issued a list of box holders at tomorrow's event. It included names of men prominent in the world of finance, politics, law and actresses, writers, society leaders, State and Federal officials.

From the advance ticket sale it is known that at least 5,000 women will be among the spectators. It is believed there will actually be several times that number. Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who was Miss Alice Roosevelt, are some of the leaders in the throng that will be present.

J. P. Morgan, Percy Rockefeller, Harry Payne Whitney, Attorney-General Daugherty, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago, Governor Edwards of New Jersey and United States Senator Shortridge are some of the more noted figures who have engaged reservations.

The fistic world will be well represented. Practically every present-day champion, with the exception of Benny Leonard, will be on hand as a guest of Promoter Rickard.

PROFITEERED IN RED CROSS SUGAR

Revelations of Amazing Deals in Paris While World Was on Rations

New York, July 1.—The New York American today presents a specific instances when the American Red Cross trafficked in commodities supposed to be GIVEN to refugees and needy persons abroad. These high lights of the American's expose include:

1—Two million pounds of sugar were sold to private parties, speculators, at from four and one-half to eight cents a pound in July, 1919. Flour was bartered in a similar ruthless fashion.

2—At least 3,000,000 yards of cloth is intended for the needy were sold to individuals in Copenhagen, in a neutral district. This was done at the direction of a man in the office of Colonel Robert L. Gibbs, commissioner of Europe for the Red Cross.

BABIES WERE FAMISHED.

The sugar "sales" were carried on, contrary to military regulations, when many refugee babies needed this food to produce milk for their famished babes. The specific sale, involving 2,000,000 pounds of the commodity, took place on June 5, 1919, and was approved by the Section of Salvage of the Red Cross.

At that time many nations were on strict sugar rations. This sugar was sold at from 4 to 8 cents a pound. The same sugar was retailed up to 10 cents a pound—and in certain instances at 40 cents a pound—with purchasers eager to buy from profiteers.

The retailers carried on their trade despite the regulations of the French government which bound every one permitting a family to have ONLY TWO POUNDS A MONTH of sugar.

The sugar sold at Paris late when released by the Red Cross to speculators. There in turn sold it for high prices to the famished people.

BABIES OFFICIAL SANCTION.

The following telegram, taken from the American's copies of official documents out of Red Cross files, shows that the Red Cross authorized the sale of sugar and flour of July 9, 1919:

"Major Stanton American Red Cross, Paris. July 9, 1919.

"Accept proposition of flour and sugar as submitted which bears the highest price possible. Your judgment on this transaction will be approved by Major Corbin at all.

(Signed) "DIRECTION OF SALVAGE."

In addition to the sale of profiteering in sugar that was bought by public subscription, the American finds that all manner of merchandise was disposed of by the Red Cross to speculators.

CLOTH SALES RIFE.

Among the articles of cloth sold were 3,000,000 yards of material. Colonel Robert L. Gibbs, commissioner of Europe for the American Red Cross, and who recently resigned from the Red Cross, had as first assistant in his office in Paris a Major Ayres. Whether Colonel Gibbs was cognizant or not of all official business that was transacted in his office is not known at this time. But the fact remains that Colonel Gibbs' name was used in connection with the sending of telegrams, the following illustrating in case the many goods were sold at amazingly low figures:

"To Major William Lewis Gerstle, Field Representative American Red Cross:

"Large quantity cotton flannel cotton knit goods, muslin and cotton cloth sold at 916 francs per 100 kilos at secret bid, 1,000 francs. Flannels cute 1.15 per yard; muslin, 1.035 per yard; cotton cloth, 1.85 per yard. Additional 2,000,000 francs flannels sold at 1.65 per yard. Exercise care to prevent as far as possible goods stuffs getting in hands of speculators.

(Signed) "Ayres—Olds."

OBTAIN HIGH PRICES.

The American's investigator, who was in close touch with the situation while working for the Red Cross, is authority for the statement that the above-mentioned goods brought amazing retail prices. The flannelette was retailed at as high as 50 and 60 cents a yard. The other goods brought prices comparable to this rate.

The goods described above were transported from the Red Cross warehouses in Paris to Copenhagen FREE. The speculators likewise paid no haulage rates on cloth bought from the Red Cross.

The goods remained nominally as belonging to the Red Cross up to transported under French bills of lading as "military goods" until delivered at the dock to the speculators. When actually delivered, and not before, the goods mysteriously become the property of the purchasers.

Repenting Pair of Record-Breaking Marriage

Mrs. James C. Watson and husband whom she found she didn't love immediately after she returned from "runaway" honeymoon.

Signed records for quickfire romance, sudden marriage and speedy dissolutionment have been lowered by the dramatic ending of the love story of Sergeant James C. Watson of Norton, overseas veteran, and Grace, his wife, a pretty Cambridge girl.

"Some speed," she wrote, in describing her hasty marriage to family friends in Cambridge.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Irwin of Pearl street, Cambridge and is supposed to be with her mother now.

Watson was a recruiting sergeant in Boston when he rapidly bloomed romance unfolded its petals. He has returned to civil life. He is twenty-six years old and his wife several years younger.

Mrs. Watson and her husband differed radically in their stories of their marriage.

She represented herself as an unwilling bride dragged away from Boston to New York by the strong personality of her sweetheart.

Watson, on the other hand, declared she was anything but coy and insisted one day, when he called on her, that he marry her at once.

She represented that her mother would make her marry "Jack Nelson, the Harvard boy," otherwise, according to the Overseas veteran.

Mrs. Watson testified that she was so confused she remembered little of her actual marriage. She said before they were back at her husband's home in Norton she knew she positively did not love him.

Husband and wife differed in their testimony as to her jewels, which she left with him when she went home to Cambridge. She said he took them from her. He said she left them with him, fearing her mother would take them away.

Watson, throughout, intimated that the cause trouble was "too much mother-in-law." The case is under advisement.

MINE COAL TAX COSTLY FOR BAY STATE

Hultman Asks Attorney-General to Oppose Pennsylvania's New Levy

Attorney-General J. Weston Allen was today requested by Fuel Administrator Eugene C. Hultman to make a fight against the tax on coal mined in the State of Pennsylvania, which will, it is estimated, take two million dollars out of the pockets of Massachusetts citizens.

Pennsylvania today put into effect a tax of 1½ per cent. on all coal mined there, and an additional tax of 2 per cent. will be put on August 27, which will increase the price of coal from 30 to 40 cents a ton. A similar tax in 1915 was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and the fight against the new taxes will be waged on that ground.

There will be no increase in the retail price locally, according to dealers, until the new rates plus the tax are received. An eventual increase is regarded as inevitable, however, if the tax remains.

STATE TO FIGHT INCREASE IN MILK PRICE

Advance of Producers Will Be Opposed If Passed on to the Consumers

The State today decided to fight any increase in the cost of milk to the consumers, following the announcement that the producers had jumped their price one-half cent a quart.

An investigation completed by Chairman Eugene C. Hultman of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life today revealed that Boston is paying more for milk than any city in the State. In Pittsfield, milk is selling at 9 cents a quart. The farmers' increase makes the cost to the distributors eight and one-half cents a quart. The distributors are meeting today to determine what action they will take.

The Turner Centre System, with branches in Charlestown, Worcester, Lowell, Lawrence and West Lynn, late today advised Hultman that it would continue to sell milk to the consumers at the old rate. "The fact of the matter is," said the Turner System, "that dealers can sell at the prices they have been getting through the flush season and at the same time can pay nee-half cent advance to the producers."

BLASTS HOPES OF SPEEDY RAIL AID

Washington, July 1.—Relief legislation for the railroads of the United States is a remote possibility at the present session of Congress. This became apparent today when Senator Cummins of Iowa, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which has been engaged in an exhaustive investigation of transportation difficulties since May 10, announced the inquiry would be discontinued until late in August.

NEAL DECRIES AUTO FINES AS WORTHLESS

State Fire Marshal Calls on Courts to Join Crusade on Drunken Drivers

State Fire Marshal George C. Neal today declared that no man addicted to the use of liquor should be given a license to operate an automobile.

He also declared that every driver convicted of operating while under the influence of intoxicating liquor ought to be sent to jail.

Marshal Neal speaks from an experience gained in thirty-four years of public service in police work.

"A fine does no good," he said. "A man who has drunk an automobile can afford to pay a fine. Send them to jail, as punishment for themselves and a warning to others.

"No man is himself who takes liquor. He is a menace to everyone on the road, in an auto or on foot. He spends without realizing the danger. You don't know which way he'll go. You can't tell how to avoid him. He endangers the life of everyone he meets.

"It is terrible to crush out the life of a child. Think of the grief and despair in the household that has reared the child by a tender age.

PUTS SACCO IN HUB ON DAY OF MURDER

Deposition of Employe at Italian Consulate Supports Alibi

Nichola Sacco, on trial at Dedham with Bartholomeo Vanzetti for the double murder at South Braintree, April 15, was at the Italian consulate in Boston between 2 and 2:15 p. m. on that day, according to the deposition of Guiseppe Androwor, a former employe of the consulate, now in Italy.

In his deposition, read by counsel for the defense, Androwor said he lived in Somerville, Mass., on April, 1920, and was employed at the consulate, No. 142 Berkeley street, for six years.

He first saw the defendant, Sacco, he said, on April 15, 1920 (day of the murder) at 2 to 2:15 p. m. in the consulate. He recognized a large photograph of Sacco and Sacco brought it to the consulate.

"I told him it was too large for the passport and he left and said he would return with a smaller one, but I never saw him again."

The deposition also stated that Sacco went to the consulate early in April to get information relative to passports. Androwor said that on April 15 Sacco objected to having other photographs made and asked if it could not be cut down to fit the form on the passport.

Before court opened at 11:15 a. m. Judge Thayer and the attorneys conferred in the judge's private office for two hours and fifteen minutes, during which counsel for the defense asked that all testimony relative to the character of the defendants be struck from the record. After considerable discussion the district attorney agreed to this.

In addition the depositions from Italy were gone over and parts struck out.

After reading of Andrower's deposition District Attorney Katzmann read the following statement to the jury.

"The Commonwealth assents to the request of both of the defendants that all evidence heretofore offered in the course of the trial to the effect that either or both of said defendants bore the reputation of being peaceful and law abiding citizens, be stricken from the record of this trial, and that such evidence heretofore offered be entirely disregarded by the jury, so that as the result of striking out the evidence the record there is no evidence before the jury that either or both of said defendants bore the reputation of being a peaceful and law abiding citizen."

Finally, she will tell how, goaded by an insane hatred and fear of the man, she sought a way out. She will charge he made advances to her seventeen-year-old daughter.

She has described her twelve years with Kaber as "hell on earth."

"I was the slave of his desires," she said today.

"He was not a man, but a beast."

tier showed that he had charged to his account gems and jewels costing more than $185,000. Mr. Mack sought to show that all these, including a pearl costing $18,000 at Tiffany's were gifts to Florence H. Leeds.

But Stillman refused point blank to answer any questions regarding the jewels pleading that it would tend to incriminate him in a crime. This was his set response to every question concerning affairs outside his recognized family.

Exasperated by the dogged refusal of Stillman to answer questions involving his relationship with Mrs. Leeds and his continued evasion of queries regarding the paternity of Jay Leeds, John E. Mack, guardian for baby Guy Stillman, openly threatened in court to bring criminal action against the multi-millionaire.

Mack's bombshell preceded an acrimonious debate between opposing counsel. Mrs. Stillman's lawyers made vigorous efforts to compel the banker to abandon his non-committal attitude on the divorce witness stand. The plaintiff's counsel contended that in view of Mack's threat to bring criminal action they had instructed their client to refuse to answer questions.

Mack, it is stated, concluded the violent scene by insisting with great vehemence that he is determined to prove a conspiracy exists between Stillman and Mrs. Leeds "to destroy" Mrs. Stillman and her son Guy.

BARES METEORIC RISE TO GREAT WEALTH

Mrs. Emma L. Flanagan, Former Boston Girl, Wins Temporary Alimony Plea

Cincinnati, O., July 1.—The first skirmish of the legal fight of Mrs. Emma L. Flanagan, former Boston woman, to obtain her rights as the wife of Dona Flanagan, multi-millionaire oil and mining magnate, has resulted in victory for her as the domestic relations court here has awarded temporary alimony of $125 per month and several attorney fees.

In addition Flanagan has agreed to pay for the maintenance of Mrs. Flanagan in sumptuous style at the palatial Flanagan residence, No. 8752 Belmont avenue, College Hill.

QUITT SCORED BY COUNSEL FOR STEINHAUSER

Attorney Nason Pictures Slain Man as Bold and Scheming Bootlegger

Leute Quitt, fatally shot by Policeman Ireland and Sinkkonen on Court street, April 29, was pictured as a bold, scheming violator of the prohibition laws by Attorney Robert W. Nason, in his opening to the jury in Suffolk superior Court today.

Attorney Nason said that Quitt was one of a number of bootleggers who had been selling liquor to truck drivers, and as the police knew had been trying to apprehend as a result of complaints of business men.

He portrayed the truck drivers, "with staring eyes and deluded minds" shooting on their hoary vehicles, potential instruments of death, tearing through the crowded streets and endangering the lives of men, women and children.

Attorney Nason said Quitt was bold enough and reckless enough to take a long chance, aware that if he could secure the bottle which Steinhauser carried under one arm, the police would have no evidence against him. He said Quitt knew the bottle was government property, but that the police policeman in the region of the heart and grabbed for the evidence.

Quitt refused to go to the City Hall avenue station, Attorney Nason said, because there were a number of small empty bottles under the seat of the truck. The man realized, according to the attorney, that their discovery would mean the loss of his license. "Perhaps by was stimulated by these pernicious influence," added the attorney.

It was declared that something should be done immediately to stop the reckless speeding to Fall River, "eighteen miles in eighteen minutes," as some of them put it.

City Hospital Teacher Gains Diplomas for Despairing Young Pupil Patients

By HAZEL CANNING.

If you were a doughty young man, in the last year of grammar school;

And you had been thinking about the day you would step upon the platform, and get your diploma;

And if, about two months before the anticipated day, you went and broke your sturdy young leg;

And had to go to the City Hospital—for ever so long, to mend the broken bones;

So that you very much despaired of that diploma;

If, then, a kindly teacher visited you in your affliction, and tutored you in your lessons, and brought you up to your grade;

And then, at last, a kindly doctor came and presented you, in bed, with your diploma;

And—you graduated—after all—why then—you'd say, it was a pretty good thing they had teachers in hospitals.

That's the very thing which happened to one despairing young citizen of the republic over at the City Hospital. That, with variations, is happening to scores of young citizens and citizenesses of the republic, all the long school year through, at the City Hospital.

For, in Boston, it's no hopeless life they let their young patients lead, once they enter the portals. Nor any uneducated, dull, dreary, bookless, penniless life, either.

KEEP UP LESSONS.

For youngsters study lessons—when they are able—and go out from their wards, at Boston City Hospital, all brought up and ready to go on with their classes. Just as if they hadn't missed school at all.

Miss Gertrude L. Farmer, head of the social service department of the Boston City Hospital, was responsible for the suggestion that the little Marys and Johnnies go on with their education though laid up for a while.

"Just the idea," agreed Dr. Dowling, superintendent of the hospital. "I'm a firm believer in the therapeutic use of books and lessons."

TEACHER APPOINTED.

So Dr. Dowling and Miss Farmer asked the Boston School Committee for a teacher, and the committee sent Mrs. Caroline MacHugh. Mrs. MacHugh brought all the school books used in the grammar grades of Boston.

She also brought raffia work and clay for the younger children to make canoes, like the one Captain John Smith traveled in after he had married that peerless Princess, Pocahontas.

And the work progressed, in this way. Mrs. MacHugh each school morning walks through the wards and gets the lay of the land in regard to the new children. She writes the teacher of each child and finds out what small doings to speak to, where he needs the coloring matter. Then she begins. The lessons go merrily on.

NEVER SO QUIET.

"Fine!" say white-capped nurses. "Our little charges were never so quiet before."

"Good" say the doctors. "Has little Isabel to thinking of her American Summer vacation camp.

History and she'll forget the pain in her little tummy."

"Three cheers," say each little Margaret and Jimmie of them all, "because you're teaching us our lessons, Mrs. MacHugh; they won't call us dunces when we go back to school."

So, you see, everybody is happy. Which leads to statistics. Mrs. MacHugh has tutored in every grade at the hospital.

She has had some pupils for as long as four months, before the illnesses were well enough for discharge, to the real school.

BOY GETS DIPLOMA.

She has prepared one boy for graduation, and has proudly seen Dr. Dowling present the diploma, in the presence of Assistant Superintendent Wilson and the young patient's mother and aunt.

And best of all, she has been the counsellor, when the young men had his doubts. For the young man said—

"Gee, teacher, gee Miss McHugh, I'm afraid you people are just giving me that diploma out of pity."

STUDY WON DIPLOMA.

"Indeed, Johnny," and Mrs. MacHugh spoke the truth that was in her; "indeed, Johnny, that diploma comes to you in Boston City Hospital, only because you have faithfully performed, in your bed here, all the lessons which qualify you for that sheepskin."

"Then everything's all right" said he; "then, don't you please telephone my mother that I wish she'd frame this diploma—quick, in a rush."

Summer vacation camp.

FAKE TICKETS FOR Y. D. DANCE ARE SOLD

Reunion Committee Warns the Public; No Armory Ball Scheduled Tonight

While officials in charge of the first annual Y. D. reunion here tomorrow, Sunday and Monday was rejoicing today that all plans had been completed for the event without a hitch their pleasure turned to genuine ire when they discovered that unknown persons were selling tickets to downtown merchants and the public for a bogus dance in the East Armory.

The spurious tickets are being sold for $2 each and read that the dance will be held Friday evening, July 3, this date falls on Sunday night and hence the cards on the fake was quickly discovered by the veterans.

Colonel K. F. Tandy of the Y. D. Club at once notified the authorities and desires to inform the general public that no such affair is scheduled by the reunion committee.

All Y. D. veterans now connected with the municipal police and fire departments will parade on Independence Day in separate detachments in their regulation uniforms.

Arrangements were made by Colonel W. J. Kevill with Police Commissioner Curtis and Fire Commissioner John R. Murphy.

"Hank" Gowdy of the Braves will be the guest of the veterans at the boxing show Saturday and will parade with the division on Monday. Hank served with the Rainbow Division in the World War as a sergeant.

James F. Rose, vice-president of the 104th Infantry Veterans' Association, announced that all wounded soldiers in Greater Boston hospitals will be properly taken care of during the reunion. Judge Day of the Knights of Columbus has arranged to house several hundred wounded men from out of town.

BOSTON MAN WEDS SPRINGFIELD GIRL

Miss Florence Elizabeth Norris, of West Springfield, and John William Mills, of No. 274 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, were married in West Springfield at a ceremony performed at the First Methodist Church.

The couple left today for a honeymoon trip along the North Shore and on their return will make their home here.

The groom, who served twenty-two months overseas, is a graduate of the Huntington School and in the Fall will enter Northeastern College.

COUNTESS VISITS VANDERBILT HOME

Newport, R. I., July 1.—The Countess Laszlo Szechenyi (Gladys Vanderbilt) and her children arrived here on board Harry Payne Whitney's yacht Valkyrie today and came ashore in a small launch at the landing of The New York Yacht Club. The countess came to Newport to visit her mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and will stay through July and August. Count Szechenyi is expected here very shortly.

He-Vamp Blamed for Girls' Foibles by Social Expert

Washington, July 1.—The he-vamp is to blame for the foibles of the modern-day girl. He sets such a pace with his trick clothes and his gayety hunts that there is nothing left for the poor girl to do but emulate him. Otherwise she'll be classified as a frump and have to make way for the frilly young thing when it comes to "invitations out."

This is the view taken by Valeria H. Parker. Uncle Sam's new guardian of public morals, explains the nonchalance of whose wants, short skirts, roll-top open work hose and other stop-look-and-listen affections of the fair sex.

The whole thing narrows down to a matter of competition, declared Dr. Parker, who had arrived in Washington to take up her duties as executive secretary to the Interdepartmental Social Hygiene Board.

"It's just a case of keeping up with each other and trying to outdo each other," she continued. "The boys are simple domesticating the girls. They spend all their money on clothes and think that is having a good time.

"It is easy enough for the girls wear short skirts, paint and powder, and even affect roll-tops." A girl feels she must be as good looking and attractive as the men if she expects to get an invitation to a dance or anything like that. If she isn't, the men won't take her out."

Dr. Parker believes that if young people would go in more for golf, tennis and similar sports they'd get their minds off style and incidentally, have a better time.

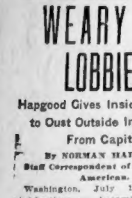
U. S. SENATE IS WEARY OF LOBBIES

Hapgood Gives Inside of Fight to Oust Outside Influences From Capitol

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, July 1.—Even the standpatters are becoming weary of the amount of lobbying going on in this town. Senator Frelinghuysen is one of the stalest pillars of the stalest point of view, but yesterday he burst out in a diatribe against the coal lobby.



HAGMAN, HAPGOOD

Not the closest friend of Senator Moses would accuse him of being a ruffian, but he is waging war against the dye lobby. As for the liberals, they are so mad that they want to make the return of the lobbyists to Washington in full force a major issue.

The sub-committee which has been considering the subject, divides two to one. Two members of this committee wish to investigate only the dye lobby, the special purpose for which they were appointed, and Senator Walsh of Montana wishes a general investigation of the mushroom growth of the lobby industry of late.

GUARD FOR CAPITOL.

It is possible that in spite of the report of the sub-committee there may be a decision of the whole committee against any investigation. In that case Senator Moses will make another speech on the dye situation.

A resolution has been suggested to Senator La Follette as follows: "Inasmuch as steps are being taken to give away or steal everything in sight, it is provided that a special guard be provided for to prevent the Capitol being carried off." The Senator took the position that although he sympathized with the resolution he thought it wiser not to introduce it.

It may puzzle some readers to see why as staunch a memberof the Old Guard as Senator Frelinghuysen should find it necessary to quarrel with the lobby of a big industry. It is a historical development. The Senator was part of a committee that set on a much more stringent plan for regulating the coal industry. In the process of fighting the stronger proposal the Senator rented out the present lamblike offering of intelligence. Naturally when he saw the coal interests objecting too even that lamblike proposal, he deemed them as ungrateful as a toothless child.

THE INTELLIGENT ATTITUDE.

While Mr. Frelinghuysen was talking Mr. Kenyon put in a few remarks. These remarks represented the insurgent attitude. Said Mr. Kenyon in effect: "The American people are not going to stand for some of the things that have been going on in the coal business. They are not going to stand for seven or eight corporations in the State of Pennsylvania controlling all the anthracite of the United States and fixing the prices to suit their own sweet will.

"Senators may talk until they are pale in the face; they may talk about Bolshevism and Socialism and undermining the Constitution, and all this kind of thing, but the amount of hard coal that the Lord Almighty has put into the earth up in Pennsylvania, now being controlled by a few corporations, is eventually going to be regulated for the benefit of the people of the United States. There will some day be the Senator that can stop it.

"Speaking of Bolshevism, it is my view that the coal operators have as much as anything else to do with making Bolshevists in this country."

ROBBED THE PEOPLE.

Senator Kenyon then proceeded to quote Senator Calder to the effect that the coal operators had robbed the people of a billion and a half dollars, and commented "That was a startling statement coming from a stand-pat Senator from the State of New York."

Kenyon wound up by observing that the only objection to Frelinghuysen's bill was that it was not strong enough, and Borah successfully got it sent back to committee on the ground that it had no real support in the Senate. So while Mr. Kenyon was weeping over the irrationality of his big business friends and the progressive Senators strangled his infant.

Another objection to this unhappy measure was brought out by Senator McKellar. While Borah was broadly hinting that the bill was "being used as a buffer," McKellar pointed out that one of its purposes was to put a string in the Federal Trade Commission, which all the standpatters are industriously pursuing. Mr. McKellar said: "The same powers entrusted to the Secretary of Commerce by this bill are now entrusted to the Federal Trade Commission. There would be a duplication of service at an enormous cost."

McKellar said he would heartily back any bill to control lobbying. "This lobbying about the Capitol," he said, "has gotten to be a shame and a scandal," and he issued a request to coal interests in particular and lobbies in general to get out. The invitation has not yet been accepted.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

By BETTY ALDEN

Briarcliff Lodge, above Tarrytown, on the Hudson, has been chosen as the spot where Dr. and Mrs. Henry A. Christian will spend their honeymoon. At a very quiet wedding attended only by immediate relatives and a few intimate friends, Miss Christian became the bride of Dr. Christian yesterday noon at the Peter Stuyvesant Hospital. The ceremony took place in the chapel of the hospital, and the bride's colors, lavender and white, were followed by Mrs. John Hopkinson Faust of Vineyard Haven. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William H. Avery of No. 356 Beacon street, with whom she has been making her home. Following their honeymoon Dr. and Mrs. Christian will announce themselves at the Hotel Somerset prior to having a home of their own in Brookline.

Society folks have just been introduced to the latest thing in wedding receptions de luxe, and we are wondering if other bridal couples may not take up the rather original innovation of Mr. and Mrs. Walton Livingston Oakley (Elsie Brown Jennings). Following their marriage, which took place yesterday at Jarlen, Ct., the Oakleys boarded a private car bound for Boston, and at Grand Central Station, after their car had been switched to a secluded platform, they held a reception for their numerous friends who were unable to go to Jarlen for the ceremony. About an hour later their car was attached to an express for Canada, and presto! the newly-wedded pair were bound for their honeymoon. All of which does away with the bustle and bustle which usually follows the ceremony. Mr. Oakley, by the way, hails from one of New York's oldest families. The bride was first married to Mr. Thomas Cortlney Jenkins of Baltimore.

The words "actively engaged" are frequently used in a highly exaggerated manner, but of Miss Dorothy Forbes, I feel thoroughly justified in stating that she is actually and actively engaged in promoting the welfare of the Summer colony at Duck Harbor, Me. For the well known Fox Forbes has actually joined the social set, company, so interested is she in the welfare of the community. Dorothy, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Murray Forbes, resides on Commonwealth avenue, has often been heralded by the press as "The Angel of Charity" and "Lady Bountiful," because of her tremendous interest for those in need, and she has done some splendid work for the Red Cross and the M. S. P. C. A. The entire J. Murray Forbes family is at Duck Harbor, where they have a delightful house overlooking Gilkey Harbor.

* * *

Duck Harbor, which belongs to the town of Isleshoro, is claiming numerous other prominent Boston families. Among these are the Edward A. Brandegees of "Faulkner Farm," Brookline; Dr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Daniels, the Theodore Frothingham's and the Horatio Hathaways of Dedham. The Islesboro Inn, in which the important social functions of the Summer colony are held, opens today.

Professor and Mrs. Edward B. Hill of Harvard University are sailing tomorrow with their three sons on the steamship Lafayette for abroad, where they will stay for several months. Professor Hill has leave of absence for a year.

I note that Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" will be presented in Hingham on July 13 and 16 for the benefit of the Hingham Historical Society.

DEDHAM POST TO FROLIC ON FOURTH

The annual field day of Dedham Post, American Legion, will be staged Monday on the legion grounds at Whiting avenue, Dedham, surrounding the $25,000 clubhouse, the gift of Mrs. Henry B. Endicott, in memory of her husband.

There will be the usual outdoor features, including fireworks and band concerts.

The festivities start at midnight Sunday, when the monster bonfire on East street will be lighted.

DO YOU KNOW VERY MANY OLD SONGS?

Whether or Not, the $6,000 Title Test Is Bound to Interest Everybody

We cannot all expect to collect $200,000 for a few minutes' work, but here is YOUR opportunity to enjoy and improve yourself while earning $1,000 or one of two hundred and nineteen lesser awards.

Note the Test Picture on this page. Observe the List of Titles, below it. Every title in the list is the name of a song.

PICK OUT YOUR TITLES.

Pick from this list the title you think best fits today's picture. Continue to do this for the remainder of a 60-day Test. At the end of the Test, send in 60 Test Pictures, each with a title written below it. When these data have been compared with the Official List of Titles the Boston American will pay the following awards IN CASH to those who have sent in the largest numbers of Correct Titles:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	1,000
ONE THIRD AWARD	750
ONE FOURTH AWARD	500
ONE FIFTH AWARD	400
ONE SIXTH AWARD	300
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	200
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	150
ONE NINTH AWARD	100
ONE TENTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
Totals	$6,000

And there you have the whole story, save for a tip or two and a few words of advice.

SKILL CALLED FOR.

This is a TEST. Your skill and ingenuity are called upon. You may have to dig for titles. The artist does not mean that finding each of the 60 titles will be as easy as an evening ride to Nantasket.

If you are looking for $1,000 that will drop into your lap, by luck or chance, with NO effort on your part, this Boston American "extra added feature" is not for you.

The Plan of the Test is as follows: Every day for sixty days the Boston American will print a Test Picture and every day for sixty days a List of Titles.

In the List of Titles, which may change from day to day without notice, will be one title which fits the Test Picture better than any other title. Sometimes this title will stand out in such a way that there can be no mistake about it. On other occasions the CORRECT title will NOT stand out.

STUDY TITLE LIST.

In other words, it is just as necessary to study and understand the List of Titles as it is to study the Test Pictures.

Although this $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test is about to enter its fourth week, an opportunity is about to be provided by which any reader of the Boston American can enter upon equal terms with those who have been in from the beginning. MONDAY NEXT WEEK THE BOSTON AMERICAN WILL HAVE THE PUZZLE OF ALL MAGIC PICTURES.

Be on the watch for that special number of the Boston American. Let the newsdealer know you will want one. This will be the ONLY number of Back Pictures in connection with the Test, it will have a double purpose. It will, the Test Editor hopes, supply every need of those who have lost, mislaid or missed a Picture or two.

NOT GUESSING CONTEST.

To win any one of the 220 awards no special knowledge of music is required. All that we borrow from songs, for Test purposes, are their titles. Some general information, a willingness to seek more information, and a few requisites for success. The Test is NOT a guessing contest.

The 60 Titles are selected before the pictures are drawn. The intent of the Artist was to illustrate these 60 titles, for Test purposes. He is not trying to help you. He challenges you to find the right titles. The Test Editor does not want any participant to feel that the Test is an "easy" one.

On the other hand, an appropriation of $6,000 has been made for successful title-writers. The Test is wide open to New Englanders and Canadians. So far as the offices is concerned the award money may be spread all over the lot or may go to one street in Montreal, Portland, Worcester or Boston. The only question will be: "Who has sent in the largest numbers of Correct Titles?"

Please read the Rules of the Test. Read them carefully. If you write to the Test Editor, kindly enclose stamped and self-addressed envelope.

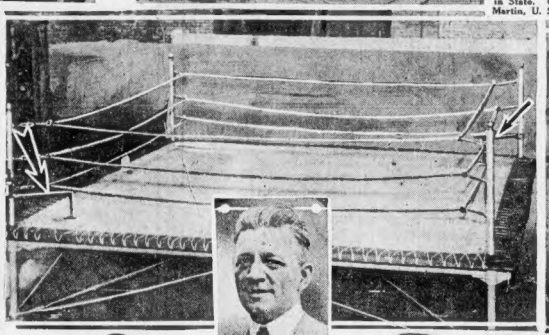
SHOOTING STARS! Lucey Stotesbury (left) and Norma Said, Los Angeles High School girls, scored 249 hits out of 250 shots. Best shots for age in State. Coached by Captain Martin, U. S. A. (U. & U.)

A PICTURE OF GRACE! Once again that big white beauty, "Radiant," has captured a first prize. Ridden by Mrs. Geraldine Redmond, he sailed swiftly past the field at the Huntington Horse Show, Huntington Bay Club, Long Island. Photo shows the scaling of a particularly difficult hurdle. Observe how smartly the animal is ridden. (W. W.)



WILDCAT KID! Asked whether he could lick Dempsey, Larry Vozzi of New York, 21 months old, threw out his chest like this and chortled: "Bring on this man killer!"

SHAKE HANDS, GENTLEMEN! Here are the properties and the actors in the "big show." The ring has a vacuum space between the fabric and the heavy canvas below it, giving a suction grip to the fighters' feet. Arrows point to the seats, which are attached to brackets and can be swung about. Patent turnbuckles hold the padded rope taut. The gloves are the costliest ever used and were made to order in San Francisco. Harry Ertle, the referee, is shown in insert. Both Carpentier (left) and Dempsey look about as they will when they step into the 18-foot arena tomorrow afternoon.

YOU BETCHA! Any amount accepted at track odds. Cast your eye on "Joe" Child, the only lady "bookie" in captivity. Created a sensation when she appeared at Epsom, England, the other day. Imagine what would happen at Saratoga if they had fair "bookies." (U. & U.)

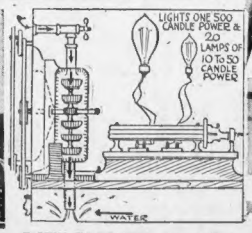
NEVER marry a prize fighter, is Mrs. "Herk" Brodie's advice to girls. Suing hubby for divorce. Few good fighters ever make good lovers, she epigrams. (Int.)

THE FABRIC OF HEROES! Memories of the terrific struggle for the supremacy of the sea by the Germans and the English were recalled with the presentation of the flags of the mine sweepers in the North Sea to Governor Cox in the Hall of Flags at the State House. The banners were presented by Captain Reginald Rowan Belknap, U. S. N., of the Naval College, on behalf of the North Sea Mine Force Association. A large gathering was present in spite of the inclement weather.



TAPPING ELECTRICITY! How would you like to light your home while washing dishes? That's what can be done by this method, devised by a French savant. Mount a turbine on a kitchen tap or faucet and connect it with a dynamo. Every time you turn the water on it stores up energy for future use. Diagram explains how simple it works. (W. W.)

THE RAVEN SHEEN! Black lingerie is rapidly becoming popular with fashionable women. This dainty garment of crepe de chine, with its lace bodice and panels, is one of the most attractive models of this hue. (Keystone.)

AT THE RACE! One of the distinguished figures at the United Hunt, L. I., in spite of her charming youth, was Mrs. Morgan Belmont, daughter-in-law of August Belmont. Observe her natty sport suit. She has lately gone in for civic work. (Central.)

SWIMMING ACTORINES! Broadway showgirls resented the suggestion that they went to the beaches to pose in non-water sea suits, so they agreed to hold a match. Here are two of the beauties who met an opposing squad of chorines at the Madison Square Pool today. Agnes Morrisey (left) and Joan Broadhurst. (W. W.)

NO MYSTERY IN THE WAY POSLAM HEALS

Poslam heals skin eruptions so quickly that some folks almost believe there's a mystery about it. Not a bit!

Years ago an expert was seeking the best way to treat skin-troubles. One day he made a combination of certain simple, gentle things and tried it on a very severe case of itching eczema.

To his delight it gave instant relief and began to heal. So he tried it on case after case of eczema, rash, pimples, and such tormenting, unsightly affections. Almost every time it succeeded. He called it "Poslam." Its merit was immediately recognized and soon it was on sale everywhere. Aided by Poslam Soap, it is bringing skin-health to thousands daily.—Advertisement.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad for Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

WANTS HARDING TO EXTEND AID TO ERIN

John F. Harrigan Believes U. S. Recognition of Republic Is Appropriate on Fourth

An appeal for recognition of the Irish Republic, as particularly appropriate on the eve of Independence Day, was sent to President Harding, by John F. Harrigan, state president of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

The appeal follows:

"On the eve of July 4, when we celebrate the greatest event in the world's history, the recognition of and adhesion to the fundamental truth of human liberty, no greater tribute to our forefathers and to the traditions and ideals which have made our country great can be offered to America and to the world than that by the official recognition by our nation of the Irish Republic we are devoted to the great principles set forth in the Declaration of Independence. We urge you to heed this plea for justice to Ireland from American citizens.

"Thereby you place yourself on a plane with Washington, Jefferson, Webster, Franklin, Patrick Henry, Samuel Adams, Abraham Lincoln and all the other great Americans whose devotion to liberty has assured perpetuation to our great institutions and hope to all struggling and oppressed peoples."

Mr. Harrigan also wrote to Senator Lodge asking the Senator to exercise his good offices in securing congressional action on the Norris resolution on Irish affairs and the right of Ireland to recognition.

BOSTON WOMEN TO GRACE Y. D. ARENA

Boston society women, not to be outdone by their New York sisters, will be out in large numbers for the Yankee Division reunion boxing bouts at Brave's Field tomorrow afternoon. Major John W. Hyatt, morale officer, who helped arrange the show, reports great interest in the reunion among women in eastern Massachusetts.

Members of the fair sex who attend will see Jock Malone and Pal Reed battle for the New England middleweight title; Nate Siegal and Paul Doyle settle their ancient grudge for the New England welterweight championship, and Bobby Josephs exchange blows with Tommy Resgan.

3,000 BOTTLES OF POP LOST IN CRASH

Hugo Vockel of Randolph avenue and Paul Cronin of No. 291 Reedsdale road, both of Milton, escaped with a few scratches when the motor truck which they were driving in Weymouth skidded into a fence and plunged down an embankment on the shore of Whitman's Pond. The greater part of 3,000 bottles of soda were lost when the truck overturned. The truck was owned by the Milton Beverage Company and was being driven down a hill near Lake View Park when the accident occurred.

TRAINMEN DEBATE PAY REDUCTION

At several conferences Boston trainmen discussed the wage reduction of 12½ per cent, which became effective today on the Boston & Maine, New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Albany railroads.

Officials of the trainmen's organizations state, however, that no action will be taken until the result of the conference of railroad men in Chicago today becomes known.

ARREST PICKETS AT CLOTHING FACTORY

Sixteen men who for the last two months have picketed the premises of the Kendazian Clothing Manufacturing Company at No. 112 Shawmut avenue, were arrested today by a squad of officers, headed by Sergeant John D. McDonald.

The men were charged with obstructing a private highway. In court they pleaded not guilty and their cases were continued for two weeks. The arrest followed complaints of tenants.

ITALY TO HAVE A NEW CABINET

Rome, July 1.—Signor Bonomi, former minister of war, has been requested by King Victor Emmanuel to form a new cabinet succeeding the Giolitti ministry.

LOCAL BREVITIES

Boston school children received the praise of the Boston Clean-Up Committee for their work in the recent clean-up campaign. The praise was contained in a letter to the Boston School Committee.

David A. Fiske of Sharon, winner of the highest scholastic honors of the Federal Board students at Boston University has been appointed to act as counselor for Federal Board Students at that institution during the absence of Professor Charles S. Bullaty.

Newly enrolled members of the Y. M. C. A. were honoreted at the Boston headquarters of the association. There was music and community singing.

A mass meeting will be conducted Saturday night at the Metcalfe street playgrounds under the auspices of the Dorchester Platform Committee. A. A. H. L. P. William J. Whalen of Tipperary, and Michael F. Murray, member of the national executive committee, will be the principal speakers.

Many narrowly escaped injury when a huge elm on Massachusetts avenue, between Tremont and Shawmut avenues, suddenly toppled and fell, blocking traffic.

Robert Fuller, seventeen years old, nephew of George M. Cohan, was taken to Margin Hospital in Allerton to be treated for a scalp wound and fracture of the shoulder, sustained when he fell from an automobile.

William W. Currie of Walker street, West Somerville, sixty-two years old, dropped dead of heart disease in a Somerville establishment to which he had gone on business.

Dr. Cornelius J. Mecilliuddy, No. 195 Huntington avenue, has been appointed temporary physician at the Wayfarers' Lodge, Hawkins street, West End.

Louise Farber, fourteen years old, of No. 4 Dennis street, Roxbury, sustained severe burns when set fire from a doughnut cap in her father's bakeshop, spattered in her face.

Fresh From Paris

THE sports note in Summer tailleurs is expressed to advantage in two models sketched near the golf course at Le Touquet. At the left blue crepe de chine is striped lengthwise from collar to skirt edge, with braid in a matching shade, from the waist line to a little below the hips the braid is applied laterally as well, giving the effect of a girdle. The long, moderately wide sleeves are braided from elbow to wrist. Uncurled ostrich covers the crown of the black straw toque.

BLACK satin cire distinguishes a decidedly smart light gray flannel tailleur, piping all the edges. The high-collared waist-coat of white flannel is similarly treated and a black ribbon cravat used. The hat is of soft black felt and the gray gauntlets have their cuffs figured in black kid.

TRUSTEE OGDEN OF SCIENTISTS RESIGNS

Manager of Publishing Company Out as Time for Court Decision Nears

David H. Ogden, for thirteen years business manager and trustee of the Christian Science Publishing Society, has tendered his resignation, with the request that it take effect immediately. His letter to the other trustees, Herbert W. Eustace and Lamont Rowlands, was made public today.

The action of Mr. Ogden was of greater significance at this time because the decision of the State Supreme Court in the hotly contested and long legal battle between the trustees and the board of directors is expected at any time.

In his letter, Mr. Ogden says he has been considering resigning for some time, but felt that "I should withhold it and do what I could to help sustain Mrs. Eddy's deed of trust, which created the trustees of the publishing society, when that deed was attacked.

"Now that the litigation between the trustees and the board of directors is concluded," the letter continues, "and pending final decision of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, I feel that I have fulfilled my duty."

The resignation of Mr. Ogden at this time gave rise to widespread discussion in local Christian Science circles, where the decision of the Supreme Court has been anxiously awaited for months.

His statement that the litigation between trustees and directors "is concluded," brought forth the announcement that another suit is still pending and will be pressed as soon as the decision of the highest court is handed down.

In this subsidiary suit, which was filed April 12, 1920, the directors sue the trustees and ask the courts to order an accounting by the trustees and that the latter be ordered to pay the amount found due under accounting to the treasurer, Edward I. Ripley, one of the plaintiffs in the suit.

BOY SCOUTS PITCH CAMP AT PLYMOUTH

Plymouth, July 1.—Camp was pitched today for 75 Boy Scouts who are to serve as ushers at the Pilgrim pageant. The boys are housed in 14 tents at Morton Park, where they are undergoing a period of strict Scout discipline.

The Scouts will also act as guides to hundreds of thousands of visitors who will come here for the pageant.

ADMITS TELLING LIE AT HOBBS ARSON TRIAL

Witness Acknowledges Saying He Was Offered $100 to Fire Box Factory

The admission that he had lied under oath was made by James Hancock, Brooks street, East Boston, testifying today in the resumed Hobbs arson trial in East Boston.

Hancock, the first witness called today, testified that he had not told the truth on the stand last Friday when he denied saying to police officers that he had been offered $100 to burn the Hobbs box yard. He said his mother had advised him to tell the truth. He then testified that he had told Special Officer James J. Driscoll and State Officer James J. Grady that William H. Finney, foreman of the box factory, offered him $100 to burn the yard two months before the fire.

George R. Hobbs, Elm street, Everett, proprietor of the box factory at No. 259-261 Maverick street, said it was a common occurrence for autos from a dump in the rear to start blazes in the box yard.

He denied any connection with setting the fire, and also denied that he knew it was going to be set.

The government's case was closed just before Hobbs took the stand, and on the conclusion of his testimony the case was continued to next Friday.

RAPS ALMS PLEA OF BOSTON VETS

The public is warned against some wounded and disabled soldiers selling cards on Boston streets.

These men are receiving $100 a month besides a monthly insurance amounting to $57.50, according to Lieutenant-Colonel Walter C. Sweeney, in charge of the Intelligence Department of the First Corps Area.

"One man in particular, besides receiving the monthly allotments, received $3,000 back pay from the government," explained the officer. "Yet this man is today hogging on Boston streets.

"He is asking alms by exposing to view a wounded arm and leg. Let no one be deceived. These men are interrupting the government, which is eager to help all such cases."

WHETS AXE FOR BIG CUT IN U.S. OUTLAY

Gen. Dawes Deliers "Ultimatum" to Budget Officers of All Departments

Washington, July 1.—General Charles G. Dawes, director of the budget, today began the new fiscal year by assembling the budget officers of all governmental departments and mapping out his program for a large reduction in the expenditures of the next year.

President Harding presided at the meeting at which Dawes called upon every budget officer to have his estimates for the fiscal year ending 1923 in the hands of the budget bureau by July 15.

Allowing only fifteen days for such a task is unprecedented in government fiscal procedure, but Dawes insists it can be done. He will not tolerate delays, he declared today.

When all estimates have been submitted the big task of the budget bureau will begin.

Reductions of expenses in running the government this year will be along drastic lines, General Dawes indicated and officials believe that if his ideas are carried out the cut in governmental expenses may amount to more than $500,000,000.

Issues Rules for Safe and Sane Fourth

These instructions for a safe and sane Fourth of July were today issued by Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote and Commissioner of Conservation William A. L. Barclay:

Don't use fire balloons.

Don't use revolvers or dangerous explosives.

Be careful of fires at camp and picnic parties.

Guard the children, especially from "sparklers."

If you are going away, fasten the doors and windows and notify the police.

MAYOR REPLIES TO CRITICISM OF FIN. COM.

Forwards Statement That Street Openings Were Properly Reaired

Mayor Peters replied today to the criticism of the Finance Commission, to the effect that the city has been careless and negligent in repairing streets in which openings have been made by corporations. He forwarded to the commission the following communication from Thomas F. Sullivan, commissioner of public works:

"I return herewith copy of report from the Finance Commission relative to openings in the streets by public service corporations and others, in which the commission recommends that all openings found not to have been restored to their original condition be so restored as soon as possible.

"beg to report that this department has been doing this since the opening of the season, and wherever an opening has not turned out satisfactorily, the person making the opening has been required to do the work over again.

"The work on School street, which the commission commends so highly, was one of the recently patching jobs in the city, and instructions have been given previously to have this done over again."

INFANTRY TO TRAIN AT CAMP DEVENS

Sites for the field artillery camps have been selected at Barnstable, and the training of these units will start July 4 and last until September 4. The Coast Artillery will go into training Saturday week.

LIGHT WORK FOR CHAMPION AS HOUR OF BIG BOUT DRAWS NIGH

FOUR-MILE JAUNT IS TAKEN

Dempsey Cuts Out Punching the Bag After Cloudburst Hits Airport Camp

By Jack Dempsey

Heavyweight Champion of the World. Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 1 — My training Thursday, the windup stuff, was more or less secret.

I'd originally planned to put in about thirty minutes at bag punching. But after a romp of four miles on the road with Mike Trant and a good rub-down, I felt in such fine fettle that I decided to dispense with the bag punching idea. It wasn't a bad move at that because when the time came for the work out, there was a young cloud burst around here, which would have made it necessary for me to swim from my house to the indoor gymnasium.

* * *

The secret training was with "Reno Jack" McAuley, who acted as sort of amateur sparring partner. Jack came out for a little visit with Joe Benson, the New York newspaper man, who will act as time-keeper for the fight on Saturday.

* * *

The preliminary breakup of the camp took place late in the day. The boys who have served me so splendidly as sparring partners packed up their bags and trunks and prepared for a get-away late tonight or early in the morning. My own things were gathered together, too, for the jaunt to Jersey City Friday. Probably I'll do a little work of the muscle limbering variety before I leave here Friday, and, of course, I'll go through some loosening ups a few other exercises on Saturday. That will finish me up.

* * *

During most of the day I was deluged with telephone calls, letters, and also visits from friends. Most of those who got in touch gave me a lot of good tips on how to win from the Frenchman—and win in a hurry. After summing up all the tricks that I'm told Carpentier is going to execute, I'm willing to submit—that is, if he does them—that he's the world champion trickster.

* * *

I'm told that he's going to wait back until he tires me out; I'm told that he isn't going to do anything of the sort—that he's going to rush me with the ball, and carry the fight into the opening sock and try to drop me with it. I'm told that he's going to come out all covered up, and that he's coming out wide open. In other words each story about the Frenchman differs.

* * *

I'm not going to try any trick stuff in that battle. Many men have won with trickery. I'm not keen for it myself. I have always depended upon a direct attack, aided by two good legs and two good hands—and that's the style of fighting that has won for me. Why should I abandon it Saturday for some trickery business which may work—and may not?

* * *

So the kind of battle that I'll wage is the same kind that won for me from Fulton, Willard, Miske, Brennan and all the others. If my method failed me yet, and I am confident that it won't, fail me tomorrow.

GEORGES' WIFE TO GET NEWS

Mme. Carpentier to Receive Fight Dispatches in Paris; Will Be Alone

By C. F. Bertelli

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Special Cable Dispatch

Paris, July 1.—"I shall receive the news of the fight round by round, absolutely alone in my flat, crowded with memories of dear Georges," declared Madame Carpentier to Universal Service today.

"Even the maids will be given the night off, for should the result upset all our hopes, I am afraid I shall not be able to control myself. I certainly do not want my friends watching me when the result is announced, no matter what it is.

NOT CERTAIN OF VICTORY.

"The newspapers quote me as saying 'I am certain that Georges will win.' They are mistaken. Nothing is certain in this world. Georges himself, who writes me daily, while he is full of confidence, never claims a victory until his opponent is stretched before him on the mat."

Should Carpentier win, Mme. Carpentier will attend a great celebration that has been planned by the Lea Acacels Society at a dance garden by one of Carpentier's best friends, Maurice Chevalier, the famous comedian.

Chevalier has ordered 500 additional bottles of champagne, which for the first time in the history of Paris dance halls, will be distributed free if the Frenchman wins the heavyweight title.

Chevalier's guests will include Mistinguett, Spinelly and Ceellexrrel, famous comediennes, and practically all of the Paris stage notables.

As the great day looms, the international gathering of fight fans, obliged to remain in Paris are feverishly betting, with the average odds of three to one on Dempsey. At this rate Leon Volterra, "the revue king," has wagered 100,000 francs.

Other large wagers reported were made by the Duke De Cases, the Duke of Marlborough, the Duke Loudeauville and Emil Cornuchet.

Cobb Likens Carpentier to Greek God

By IRVIN S. COBB.

New York, July 1.—I saw Carpentier once. It was in Paris in the Summer of 1918 at a benefit of boxing matches put on in behalf of wounded French soldiers. He acted as referee of one of the bouts. To me he seemed a handsome, monterly, kindly, well-set figure of a man and an athlete.

His profile made me think of some of our own moving picture heroes with their rubber-set eyelashes and their Hudson seal hair. His shape put me in mind of an illustration for a unionsuit ad, as seen in one of our popular weekly magazines.

Seeing him, I did not say to myself: "Here is a young Greek god come upon earth. Here is the inheritor of the grace of the sculptured dream-throughout. Here is the reincarnation of the Attic Adonis."

I said: "I recognize this youth—he is the model who sits for the illustrator who makes the pictures for the manufacturer who turns out those new turned-down collars back home."

What caused me mentally to offer him the tribute of a salute was not the perfection of his outline, which was not to be denied. Nor yet was it the beauty of a finely-attuned nature flashing forth from his eye for somehow, I could not behold this latter thing.

What made me do it was the fact that on his breast he wore a medal which attested his valor as one having risked his life for his country against a foe whose fists were not potted in the upholstery of the mattress-maker, but a foe who came at him with shrapnel, high explosives and poisoned gases.

HONORED HIM AS A SOLDIER.

I did not appraise him as a professional, making his living by mauling his fellow-man out of shape for hire. I honored him as a soldier. I still do. He has my best wishes—and, I fear me, is going to have my sincere condolences.

Also, once I saw Dempsey; it was when he, cloaked in the athletics out of that tired business man, Jess Willard, at Toledo two years ago. When Dempsey scrooged into the ring he was scared stiff or else I, viewing him from a distance of not more than twenty feet, was woefully mistaken.

I am sure he had been intimidated by the four-ring bluff and a bunch of bourbon. The same superman stuff which made the German efficiency machine seem pointedly so invincible back in 1914, had, as the saying goes, garnered his goat in advance of the event.

LOOKS FOR DEMPSEY TO WIN.

But when he found, as he did, in the first thirty seconds of fighting that he held a pair of aces—one ace in either gloved paw—against a busted flush, he became the proper fine fighter, cruel, relentless, cocksure and superbly competent; a cross between a wildcat and a mad bison-bull.

And something tells me he'll duplicate in New Jersey what he did in Ohio. Here he'll have at the outset what he lacked in Toledo. He'll have prestige behind him and confidence.

He'll be the champion defending the title where then he was the challenger seeking to far it loose from another. The advantage mainly will be on his side; at Toledo he figured beforehand that they would all, or nearly all, be against him.

Consider his reach; win or lose he gets the bigger end of the purse. In that isn't reaching, somebody please tell me what is? He is heavier than Carpentier—much heavier from the neck down, although perhaps not so heavy from the neck up.

His normal chest measurement—that is, provided any champion since boodler old Bob Fitzsimmons a day has owned a normal chest—is 42 inches, against 41 for the Frenchman.

His chest expanded—and one gathers that Jack keeps it expanded except when veterans of the World War are passing by on parade—shows 46 inches; Carpentier's is only 43½.

In height he overtops his opponent by an inch and a half. He is the superior in size of biceps and size of wrist. He is 26 years old; Carpentier is 27. And in the boxing game youth counts for a lot.

GEORGES TAKING BIG CHANCES.

For his part the contender is said to be quicker on his feet; is said to be a better tactician, a better boxer, perhaps a quicker thinker. He is fighting at the fittest representative of a land which showed the highest casualty averages and the smallest slacker list, population considered, of any country among the allies in the great war.

He has the cordial endorsement of all of France, all of England and practically all of the American Legion. Both he takes a gosh-awful chance when he climbs into the same roped inclosure with Jack Dempsey.

Let us pray.

Each Fighter Says He Will Win

New York, July 1.—The usual "before the battle" statements breathing confidence have been issued from the camps of the rival fighters.

Champion Jack Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, who will leave Atlantic City for Jersey City today, announce that "they" expect to win within a few rounds.

Challenger Georges Carpentier, through Manager Francois Deswamps, admits that he was never in better shape and says he will win, though he would not attempt to predict how long the battle will last.

BRAVES GAME IS POSTPONED

Double-Header Starts at 12:30 Tomorrow; Giants Trade Rapp

By Nick Flatley

Wet grounds caused the postponement of the scheduled double-header between the Braves and Giants today. A double-header will be played tomorrow, the first game starting at 12:30.

* * *

The thunder of the Braves coming along from the immediate rear has started the Giants strengthening. They have Johnny Rawlings ready to play second base as soon as the weather allows baseball, and Casey Stengel for their outfield. The two athletes were taken from the Phillies, who are anchored in last place and don't care what happens.

Rawlings, a pretty good performer and one-time Brave, will take over the second basing, and Pfiech will shift to third, his natural position. Stengel will probably draw down the regular centre fielding assignment, as his experience will help the team in the long drive that's ahead for the pennant.

* * *

Goldie Rapp, the season's most expensive disappointment, and Lee King, substitute outfielder, were passed along to the Phils, as well as a Texas League first baseman, who was doomed to the bench as long as George Kelly cared to play for the Giants.

JUNIOR GOLF IN FINAL ROUND

Learnard of Dartmouth Playing Quinlan of Scarboro for State Title

By Robert E. Harlow.

Ted Learnard, Dartmouth sophomore, and Billy Quinlan of Scarboro, young in years but advanced in golf, met at the Bellevue Golf Club, Melrose, today, in an eighteen-hole match for the title of State junior golf champion, an honor which has been held by players who in after years have won more important golfing honors.

* * *

Learnard is new factor in Massachusetts golf. He was formerly a Newton High School boy, but spent the last school year as a Dartmouth freshman, and he learned a lot of golf up on that hilly Hanover nine holes. He won the college championship this year, quite a rade thing for a freshman to do.

* * *

Having beaten Seniors and Juniors at Hanover, the boys in the State Junior championship looked simple to Learnard. In the semi-final round he found himself opposed by Eddie Lowery, the champion for two years. Eddie was eager to set a new record by whining it three times, but Learnard missed up his expectations. He was four up on Eddie at the turn and won by a six and five score.

* * *

Learnard did a two at the third and a two at the fifth against Lowery. He sank a ten-foot putt at the third and a twenty-footer at the fifth. When the long one went under, making Learnard four up, Lowery remarked: "Whoa—it's hard to beat a deuce."

* * *

Learnard left few openings, and when he did take a shot more than par Lowery did not take advantage, missing a number of short putts which would have lengthened the life of the match. The cards:

Learnard	4	6	2	4	2	6	5	5	5	—38
	4	3	4	4
Lowery	5	6	3	3	5	5	6	5	6	—42
	5	4	4	4

* * *

It rained hard during both rounds, but this did not prevent all of the eight survivors of the second round from reporting. The boys finished the morning play dressed not. Their locks enough to have a change of clothes started the afternoon dry. The others stood by the boiler a few minutes and then went right out in the rain again.

ARENA TO RECEIVE BIG FIGHT RETURNS

More than 8,000 seats will be at the disposal of fight enthusiasts tomorrow afternoon at the Arena when the returns from the Dempsey-Carpentier go will be received. Arrangements have been made by the management of the Arena to illustrate every blow struck. There will be other entertainment to keep the crowd happy.

South Boston Post to Run Bouts

An amateur boxing tournament will be held under the auspices of the Michael J. Perkins Post, A. L., at their headquarters hall, Broadway, South Boston.

The four classes of 115, 125, 135 pounds and heavyweights will be represented by boys from all parts of the Hub.

CARP WIN WOULD BE POPULAR

Sam Hall Says All Are Hoping Georges Will Come Through Tomorrow

Manhasset, L. I., July 1.—With the biggest event of Georges Carpentier's stormy career only a matter of twenty-four hours away, peace and quiet reigns in the Frenchman's training camp.

Today it was different. The same world had forgotten everything else. Hundreds of millions of people were thinking only one thought:

"Will Georges come through?"

While 99 per cent. of that world was of the opinion that Georges was going to certain defeat, the entire 100 per cent. was hoping he would deliver.

There were no official communications forthcoming.

"We have no comment to make," was the word Gus Wilson passed out.

DEMPSEY LEAVES CAMP FOR BATTLE SCENE

By Sid Mercer

Atlantic City, July 1.—This is getaway day for Jack Dempsey. Of course, the "big moment" is still many tedious hours away, but today Jack is released from the bondage of training and he is happy in this liberation after more than two months of close confinement.

"Gee, the hours drag now," piped the champ yesterday noon, as he slumped into a big wicker chair on the front porch of his cottage at Airport, toyed with Danny McKetrick's ears and watched the rain beat down on the sandy waste between the house and the arena across the road.

"Only forty-eight hours more and I'll tell you all about it," chattered Dempsey. "I'll be an expert on the fight then myself."

* * *

The sudden idea tickled Dempsey, and as soon as he had sprung it he let out a hearty laugh. His white teeth gleamed through his tanned and unshaved features. He didn't look like a worried man.

That wasn't the only time he laughed, either. For more than an hour he partook freely of a lively running conversation that touched on everything from fighting to song-writing. The latter subject was brought up by the delivery to Jack of several sheets of the latest popular airs. Joe Benjamin brought them back from Philadelphia.

"Must learn these," said Dempsey as he glanced over the sheets, read the words aloud—often pausing to laugh at silly sentimentalities—and tried to hum the choruses. Jack can read music a little.

"I've been hiding out for so long," he apologized, "that I didn't know any of this new stuff. You must teach it to me, Joe, and we'll get some new records, too."

The champion's love of music is one of his few hobbies—music and dogs. Just before Benjamin, Tommy Furrie, Jack Renault and "Professor" Malloy arrived by automobile from their boxing expedition to Philadelphia, Dempsey had sent his three pet dogs to New York.

He sent them in his big limousine, with Brother Bernard Dempsey riding in the front seat with the driver and the dogs mushing around in luxury as they lounged against the upholstered sides of the car or stretched out on the rear seat.

"Don't forget, take good care of 'em," was Jack's parting injunction as the car rolled away with Dempsey's canine friends gazing through the windows in dumb wonder at leaving the master behind.

Dan McKetrick, Jack Kearns, Teddy Hayes, the faithful Mike Trant and a humble listener made up the porch party early in the afternoon. The champion was taking a nap when Kearns drove out with Joe Bannon, official timekeeper, and Reno Jack McCaffrey, who were taking an early train back to the city.

Bannon and McCaffrey were for sliding out without bidding Dempsey good-by, but he heard their voices and came down the stairs. Teddy Hayes, who has a trainer's vision always, made Jack put on a heavy sweater. A few scattering raindrops came down as Dempsey and Bannon lingered on the steps.

"Come in out of the rain, Champ," ordered Hayes.

"Aw, this won't hurt anybody. Besides I may have to fight in a rainstorm and I haven't had any training for that," replied Dempsey.

Bannon and McCaffrey hopped into their car and drove away with Dempsey calling after Joe to be sure to have his watch running on daylight saving time tomorrow. Then Jack sat down, rocked his chair vigorously, borrowed McKetrick's cane and fooled with it as he talked.

It would be foolish to assert on the eve of the most important event of his life that Dempsey has no nerves. But they are the nerves of a boy brimming over with eagerness, impatience and fond anticipation. A man of fifty might approach such a situation with few outward signs to betray his feelings, but that is not the way of youth. It is not given to many men to reach the top at twenty-six.

At Toledo Dempsey was the challenger. He was not insured of the nerve of a champion. Now he is guroned. A fortune is at stake. He faces a mysterious opponent, he has been subjected to the strain of training, constant surveillance and public scrutiny for ten weeks. He would not be human if at his age he did not display eagerness to have done with it all.

Dempsey has nerves, but he isn't nervous. Among friends he has a lot of fun. When he is on his official dignity he doesn't enjoy himself. When the car containing Benjamin Renault and other members of the Philadelphia expedition discharged its passengers, Dempsey "raised" Benjamin Joe Pought in the rain Wednesday night.

"They tell me you almost skidded out of the ring," he teased. "Wish you would track me some of those steps. I might need them on Saturday if it's a bad day."

Big Honor Should Georges Win Fight

Paris, July 1.—It was reported here today that Georges Carpentier will receive the insignia of the Legion of Honor if he whips Jack Dempsey in the fight at Jersey City tomorrow.

WILL COVER RING IN CASE OF RAIN

Rickard Says Bout Will Be Staged Whatever Weather Conditions May Be

Jersey City, N. J., July 1.—It will take a veritable cloudburst to stop the Dempsey-Carpentier fight tomorrow. Promoter Rickard has made plans to go through with the bout in the event that only a light rain falls.

He will have a covering over the ring to protect the fighters when the drop dry. The covering will be so fixed that it will not obscure the view of spectators in the pavilion.

In the event that rain falls all day and too hard to permit holding the bout, it will be postponed until the same hour Monday afternoon. The big fight is scheduled to begin promptly at 3 o'clock Eastern daylight saving time (2 p. m. Eastern standard time).

NORTON TO MEET TILDEN FOR TITLE

London, July 1.—R. L. C. Norton, of South Africa, defeated Manuel Alonzo, of Spain, in the final round of the championship tennis tournament at Wimbledon. Norton will meet William T. Tilden 2nd, of Philadelphia, present champion, in the challenge round tomorrow.

SAUCE AND SASS

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

"I'm more an American than nine out of ten because my people were among the earliest settlers in Virginia," declared Jack Dempsey of shipyard fame in a recent interview, which prompted:

A BUDDY'S QUESTION

Perhaps his name is Antoni,
Or Mike, Sven, Hans or Jake—
It matters not—'twas plain to see
His worth to us in loyalty
Means much, much more than ancestry
When honor was at stake.

He wasn't much to look upon—
You'd hardly say he'd pass—
For here and there some things were wrong,
And there and here some things were gone,
And then, again, he wasn't strong—
He'd breathed some German gas

But still he had a laugh or grin
For all who came his way—
The doctors made a pet of him,
And said it was as tough as sin
To think his chances were too slim
To last another day.

I wandered over to his cot—
So smooth and cool and white—
And there unloaded things I'd brought
And offered him quite all the lot,
But learned 'twas something else he sought—
He questioned of the fight.

He asked not who would win the test—
His int'rest there seemed vague—
He asked not whom I thought was best—
'Tis buddy who will soon "go West,"
Just this brief inquiry addressed—
"Will Dempsey wear our flag?"

Medbury's Column

Shooting dice is a mathematical pastime known as alley arithmetic.

Dice are sometimes called ivory adding machines.

Anybody who studies bone algebra can never learn to count over seven.

Each lump broke out in six places and the only way to keep from getting seven is to play with one cube.

This game is popular all over the country, but it is played more in the South and is known as Southern dominoes.

A man doesn't have to be a railroad official to own rolling stock.

Of course, some people use dice for gambling purposes, but most of us use them to brush up on our arithmetic, and we study our lessons in the first alley we come to.

It's cheaper to go to college because it costs one alley student two hundred dollars learning what number seven looked like.

The university students in the ivory arithmetic classes hold school whenever they're enough of them present.

And school lets out as soon as some cop comes around the corner.

Opinions of Ring Experts and Others on Outcome of Tomorrow's Fight

"The newspapers quote me as saying, 'I am certain that Georges will win.' They are mistaken. Nothing is certain in this world. Georges himself, who writes me daily, while he is full of confidence, never claims a victory until his opponent is stretched before him on the mat."—Madame Carpentier.

"If the training season was to run a couple wks. longer and a few more feminine and semi-feminine journalists was to go out and see Carpentier and write 3,000 wds. about his eyelashes and mustrile, I am afraid I would half to start pulling earnestly for Jack to perform a major operation on Georgin's greek profile."—Ring Lardner.

"In my opinion the bout will end in a knock-out before the end of the sixth round, and if it comes in one of the early rounds Carpentier will be the victor. If it becomes a question of endurance and ability to take a beating Dempsey will win. At odds of three or four to one I should back Carpentier."—William A. Brady.

"It looks very much like Dempsey."—Bob Edgren.

"If Carpentier goes over what may be a decidedly uncomfortable first round, he has a royal chance of taking down the money. In fact if the fight goes into the third round, I would think that Carp is almost sure to win the title."—Ed Smith, Chicago American.

"They say Carpentier is too delicate and frail, but they said that before the Beckett fight and Beckett was a bit of a grizzly."—Lyons.

"Carpentier must win in the first or second round, or else he is a doomed man."—Georges Gloria, the only man who ever knocked out the French champion.

"Georges is the most formidable boxer in the world. The odds are four to one against Carpentier. The real odds are 50 to 1 against Dempsey."—George Bernard Shaw.

"Although nobody has asked me, it is my form fitting opinion that the fight will be like a one-legged hobo's laundry. Just one sock."—"Bugs" Baer.

"It is, of course, quite within the bounds of possibility that Carpentier will win. He is a good puncher with his right hand, and Dempsey can be hit. It all depends upon whether Carpentier can hit him hard enough to bring him down before Carpentier is himself hit."—Damon Runyon.

'ZERO' HOUR AND ALL IS WELL

Both Battlers in Retirement on Eve of World's Title Scrap

By John A. Malloy

Manhasset, L. I., July 1.—It is the "zero hour" for Jack Dempsey of the United States and M. Georges Carpentier of France. Mystery as deep, as impenetrable as ever cloaked the silent movement of troops veils the eleventh hour movements of the celebrated principles in tomorrow's "Battle of the Century."

The figurative curtains are drawn tightly about Dempsey's quarters at Atlantic City and just as tightly are they drawn at the Carpentier training camp on the rolling Mathews estate at Manhasset.

Particularly impressive is the cloak of mystery lying heavily over the Carpentier camp. The blinds are drawn tonight in the white house lying back on the Hempstead turnpike. No murmur, no voice reach the outside. Sentinels, as silent and grim as sentries of a battle camp, guard each approach to the house.

No hint of the pale blonde French gladiator's indoor activities has been given a high-keyed, expectant world since last Wednesday. Has he worked since Wednesday? What is his mental state as the time for the supreme clash draws upon him? How are the annoying, tell-tale nerves? All these questions must remain unanswered. Little Francois Descamps, the usually volatile manager, remains in hiding, as mysterious as his celebrated protege.

Twilight Game

Arlington Post, No. 38, American Legion, will play the Boston Consolidated Gas Company nine, on the Ray Pond Athletic Field, Arlington, this evening.

Counterfeiters, "Specs" and Reformers Lose

New York, July 1.—With more than a million dollars already in the coffers of Promoter Tex Rickard, according to a statement issued from his office, the seat sale continues, though not as briskly as it might have had it not been for the appearance of counterfeit tickets.

Would-be purchasers of tickets have become wary as a result of repeated warnings against the bogus seat, checks that have been put into circulation, and as a result some ticket agencies have begun to sell the genuine pasteboards for less than their face value.

Along Broadway last night $50 seats were to be had in some instances for $30 and $25. These seats for the most part were brought back from outside points where ticket agents contracted for more than they could dispose of. Ten dollar seats were offered for $8 in several instances.

Despite the effect of the drive of the counterfeiters, it is a practical certainty that the Jog Arena at Boyle's Thirty Acres will be filled almost to capacity when the fighters answer the bell.

The reformers who made several unsuccessful attempts to put a stop to the battle have fired their last big salvo without result. Governor Edwards of New Jersey has announced that the bout is strictly within the bounds of the law of his State and that it will be held as scheduled.

SCHOOL ATHLETICS

By Fred C. Lane

George "Ossie" McLaughlin, formerly coach of Somerville High, who was deposed by a recent ruling of the Somerville School Board, is now the proud possessor of an office in the Massachusetts High schools. Both of these positions offer larger salaries than did Somerville High.

* * *

In addition to these offers McLaughlin is thinking seriously of taking up his former position as architect, at which business he was successful previous to the war.

* * *

Six men have applied to the School Board for the position of coach of Somerville High. The deposing of McLaughlin may put the city to considerable expense, it being necessary to fill the positions of football and baseball coach as well as the positions of teacher and physical director, all of which were held by McLaughlin.

* * *

The weather man has assured the many friends and spectators who are anxious to take in the Boston-New York all-baseball game scheduled for Fenway Park, Saturday afternoon, of rain weather. This opinion is all that is needed to make the affair a success if the advance sale of tickets is taken for evidence.

* * *

* * *

Peabody High has withdrawn its protest over the unplayed Lynn English-Lynn Classical game, according to Coach Donovan. For a time there was talk of shifting the decision of Judge Landis, whose assistance was sought on the issue.

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Strelsa Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her arrival into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wyckerly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. He wins her interest, and obtains permission to call at her home. She tells him there can be nothing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. She bids him good-by for two weeks. Much gossip is talked at Mrs. Sprowl's tea and Strelsa hears of Quarren's love affairs. Strelsa goes south on a yachting trip, and she and Quarren write. When she returns, Sir Charles Mallison and Langly Sprowl become her ardent suitors. She takes tea with Mrs. Sprowl, who tries to get her to marry Sir Charles. Mrs. Sprowl warns Langly to keep away. Strelsa invites Quarren to dine with her alone. They drink a toast. She tells him she is not the same woman she was when she went South.

VAGUELY she was aware of their contact. He neither spoke nor stirred; and her palm burned softly, melting against his.

At last he lifted her hand and laid his lips to it in silence. Small head lowered, she dreamily endured his touch — a slight caress over her forehead—the very ghost of contact, suffered his cheek against hers, closer, never stirring.

Thought drifted, almost dormant, lulled by the infinite and rhythmical currents which seemed to set her body swaying, gently, and, listless, non-resistant, conscious of the charm of it, she gradually yielded to its sorcery.

Then, like a shaft of sunlight slanting through a dream and tearing its fabric into tatters, his kiss on her lips awoke her.

She strove to turn her mouth from his—twisted away from him, straining, tearing her body from his arms; and leaned back against the stair-rail, gray eyes expressionless as though dazed. He would have spoken, but she shook her head and closed her ears with her hands; nor would she even look at him, now.

Right and bearing sealed against him; pale, expressionless, she stood there awaiting his departure. And presently he opened the iron and glass door; a flurry of icy air swept her; she heard the metallic bang of the spring lock, and opened her hungry eyes.

New Pulses

Deadly tired she turned and ascended the stairs to her bedroom and locked the door against her maid.

Thought dragged, then halted with her eyes on the dropped coils the seat before the dresser and took her combing head in her hands. Cheeks and lips grew hotter; she was aware of strange senses dawning, of strange nerves signalling; stranger responses—of a subtle fragrance in her breath so strange that she became conscious of it.

She straightened up, staring at her flushed reflection in the glass, while through and through her shot new pulses, and every breath grew tremulously sweet to the verge of pain as she recalled dismayed from the unknown.

Unknown still—for she crouched there shrinking from the revelation—from the restless wonder of the awakening, wilfully deaf, blind, ignorant, defying her other self with pallid flashes of self-contempt.

Then fear came—fear of him, fear of herself, defiance of him, and defiance of this other self, glimpsed only as yet, and yet already dreaded with every instinct.

But it was a losing battle. Truth is very patient. And at last she looked Truth in the eyes.

So, after all, she was what she had understood others were or must one day become. Unawakened, pure in her inherent contempt for the lesser passion; incredulous that it could ever touch her; out of nothing had sprung the lower menace, full armed, threatening her—but of a moment's lassitude, a touch of a man's hand, and his lips on hers! And now all her life was already behind her — childhood, girlhood, wifehood—all, all behind her now; and she, a stranger even to herself, alone on an unknown road; an unknown world before her.

With every instinct inherent and self-inculcated, instincts of modesty, of reticence, of self-control, of pride, she quivered under this fierce humiliation born of self-knowledge—knowledge scarcefully admitted and defied with every breath—but no longer denied.

She was as others were—fashioned of that same and common clay, capable of the lesser emotions, shamefully and incredibly conscious of them—so keenly, so incomprehensibly, that, at one unthinkable instant, they had obscured and were actually threatening to obliterate the things of the mind.

Was this the evolution of her Winter's idleness and gaiety and the fatigues of pleasures had been so subtly preparing for her? Was that strange moment, at the door, the moment that man's enemy had been awaiting, to find her unprepared?

Wretched, humiliated, she bowed her head above the flowers and silver on her dresser—the faltest odor she did not know—she had so long unconsciously thanked God that she was not like other women in the homes of faith and in the sinful streets of Ascalon.

News of Her

Strelsa was no longer home to Quarren, even over the telephone. He called her up two or three times in as many days, ventured to present himself at her house twice without being received, and finally wrote her a note. But at the end of the month the note still remained unanswered.

However, there was news of her, sometimes involving her with Langly Sprowl, but more often with Sir Charles Mallison. Also, had Quarren not dropped out of everything so completely, he might easily have met her dozens of times in dozens of places. But for a month now he had returned every day from his office to his rooms in the Legation, and even the members of that important diplomatic body found his door locked after dinner, though his light sometimes brightened the transom until morning.

Westguard, after the final rupture with his aunt, had become a secured hermit—source because of the low motives of the public which was buying his book by the thousands and reading it for the story, exclusively.

Incidentally, had cast him off; to him she was the over-fed embodiment of society, so it pleased him to consider himself as an exile between society and himself. It tasted of martyrdom, and now his own public had wisely gone back to what he according to his ideals; nobody cared for his economics; his social evils, his moral philosophy; only what he considered the unworthy part of his book was eagerly absorbed and discussed. The proletariat had grossly betrayed him; a hermit's exemplary but embittered career was apparently all that remained for his declining years.

So after dinner he, too, retired to seclusion behind bolted doors, pondering darkly on a philosophic novel which would be no novel at all but a dignified and crushing rebuke to mankind—a solid slice of moral cake thickly frosted with social economics, heavy with ethical plums, and without any story to it whatever.

Meanwhile his book had passed into the abhorred class of the best sellers.

Abrupt Absence

As for Lacy and O'Hara, both had marked Quarren's abrupt retirement and his absence from that section of the social puddle which he was accustomed to embellish and splash in. O'Hara, inclining more toward sporting circles, noticed Quarren's absence less; but Lacy, after the first week, demanded an explanation at the dinner table.

"You spoiled a party for Mrs. Lannis," he said—"and Winifred Miller was almost in tears over the charity tableaux!"—

"You mean that you're chucking the whole baily bing for keeps?"

"Practically."

"Why?" asked O'Hara, looking up blankly.

"Oh," said Quarren laughing, "I'm curious to find out what bunkum I really am in. Until this week I've never had time to discover that I was trying to be a broker in real estate. And I've been one for almost three years and never know it."

"One's own company is the best," growled Westguard. "The monkey people sicken you and the public make you ill. Solitude is the only remedy."

Riches Without Love or Love Without Riches, Which?

THE outstanding figure in Robert W. Chambers' romance, "The Streets of Ascalon," is Strelsa Leeds, a beautiful girl, who has been left a widow after marriage to a man who maltreated her.

After her advent into New York society, she meets suitors of all sorts, among them Rix Quarren, a real man who has been spoiled by an idler's life, and Langly Sprowl, whose millions make him a formidable admirer. Quarren falls madly in love with Strelsa, and his love starts him on the road to rehabilitation.

She comes to the point when she has to decide whether she will marry for the material luxuries Sprowl can give her or for the love which in her heart of hearts she knows she has for Quarren.

Her environment and the difficult life she has led with Leeds make her powerfully inclined toward the easy road. Her better nature urges her to forego this road for the higher ideal.

Story Up to Date

Francis Manners, an architect and artist, is doing some special work in California while his beautiful wife, Diana, and their small girl, Tam, are in the East. He gets a letter from Diana and begins to suspect all is not right. On his return home, Frank finds Diana is in love with Ogden Fenn. Frank tells her he will give her grounds for a divorce. Mary Hastings fails in her plea to Diana to give up Fenn and return to Frank. Diana has difficulty in making up her mind what to do. Mrs. Langham tells her of an early love. Frank's dissipation begins to take effect on him. Diana gets her divorce and is awarded heavy alimony and the custody of Tam. Frank takes Mrs. Herriot to the country and uses her as a model. She writes a friend that he will never fall in love with her.

ONE day—and most of the leaves had fallen by now—Frank Manners announced that he could do no more good in that place and suggested that they return to the city.

"We've played at love in a cottage," he said, "and we know all about it. Would you like to keep it up forever?"

The Last Day

"No, dear," she said. "And why? Because I can't make you happy. God knows I've tried every way I could think of. It's easy to make most men happy for a time, but I've never made you happy for one single minute."

He slipped his arm around her shoulders and pressed her close to his side.

"It's our last day," he said, "let's spend it on the lake. We'll paddle out to the middle and just sit and let the wind take us; where we touch shore we'll eat lunch and then I'll lie on my back and smoke, and you can tell me things."

They adhered to that plan, and a little sadly, since it was for the last time. When they had been wafted ashore and had lunch, Frank Manners lay on his back and smoked with his head in Mrs. Herriot's lap. Presently he saw a V-shaped wedge of wild geese flying south, and he pointed them out to his mistress. When the geese were no longer visible he shivered a little as if he were cold, and got up.

"My dear child," he said, "you were complaining that you had not made me happy. You saw those geese?"

And forthwith, talking very quietly, he told her something of their habits; how they love but once. How sometimes the survivor of a mating mourns his mate for nearly a century. He told her how certain ganders have kept flying into the guns until they were at last killed, and how certain observers believed that such birds actually committed suicide.

"Once in a while," he said, "you find men who are geese enough to behave—like geese. If you haven't made me happy it's because I am one of those men. . . . The wild goose has lost his mate, my dear, and his life is all mourning."

All Mourning

She was profoundly touched. And they walked in silence to where they had left the canoe.

"You tried the impossible," he said, after they had paddled a little way. "With the utmost good nature, tact and charm, if I had been a stick or a stone you would have succeeded. But you were up against a wild goose."

Mail was waiting for them at the house, and among Mrs. Herriot's letters was one from Miss LeNeuf telling of a mutual friend's suicide. The man with whom the mutual friend had lived for some years had had suddenly grown tired of her pretty, respectable girl, of good family, and married her at the end of a short engagement.

Miss LeNeuf wrote: "Martha seemed to take the thing quietly enough. She said Vic had settled a lot of money on her and she was square thing all around. . . . The next day, my dear, they found her dead in her bathtub with her wrists almost severed. Lois, her colored maid, was the one to find her, and she ran right down to my flat and banged on the door till I got up and opened it.

"I got headquarters on the phone and then ran upstairs. Only Martha's face showed. And, of course, the water looked like pure blood. She looked like a white mask that some one had laid on a red sofa. . . . Where, I ask you, does any one find the courage to use a razor?"

They were both very much shocked by the letter. Martha, it seemed, had posed more than once for Manners years ago. She had been an independent sort, with a good deal of natural dignity.

His Way to Die

"I could no more cut myself," exclaimed Mrs. Herriot. "I'd rather sit till doomsday and listen to my heart breaking like ice in Spring. How would you kill yourself if you got the best in your power?"

"Oh," said Manners, "I have it all nicely and comfortably arranged. I'd go to my home in the country when the weather was around zero. I'd put on the suit I was married in. When it got to be almost bed-time, I swallow enough morphine to make me comatose. I open all the windows in the room where I used to sleep. I lie down on the bed without any covering on me. I cross my right ankle over my left, I fold my hands on my breast, and nobody ever knows whether the morphine killed me or whether I froze to death."

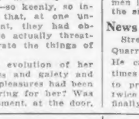
Bachelor Girl's Reflections

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

MANY a man has all his plans made to be married, and doesn't know it—because the girl hasn't told him yet.

A popular clergyman has taken half the joy out of life by announcing that the short skirts are perfectly proper, modest and sensible. Good gracious! Can't a girl be a "menace" if she wants to?



A widow may hold her second husband up to Hoyle by inspiring him with an ambition to live up to the "perfections" of her first; but a divorcee can get the same effect with hers by inspiring him with a wholesome dread of repeating the errors of her first.

The "villain" in the old-fashioned melodrama is the one who is doing his worst to force the girl to marry him; in the modern play he is the one who is doing his best to prevent her from marrying him.

A man doesn't mind what his wife says to him—it's the things she says AT him to other people that make him writhe and thirst for freedom.

A woman must be either happily married or awfully passee when she ceases to feel a thrill of expectation at the tinkle of the telephone bell or the magic sound of the postman's whistle.

What makes most men dizzy these days is the high altitude of the skirts accompanied by the corresponding low brain pressure.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

EVERY fellow has a slogan; there is one for every man; Brown and Johnson, Smith and Hogan each must have a working plan. Though they scarcely realize it, they use slogans every day; they might hate to advertise it, for all mottoes aren't O. K. Smith says: "Life owes me a living, ease and pleasure I expect, and I haven't one misgiving but that, some way, I'll collect." Though he's very strong and agile, if you'd see him loaf and shirk you would think him far too fragile for the lightest kind of work. Johnson's slogan is a terror and it causes me a shock, for his brain's befogged in error and his watchword, "Knock, man, knock." Knocking in and out of season, old and young he knocks alike; knocking without rhyme or reason, all day long his sledges strike. At his fate he's always squealing, nothing suits him down the line; but I have a sneaking feeling that as blacksmith he would shine. There are slogans bright and snappy, there are slogans full of pep, and the right ones make you happy so, when picking, watch your step! Any man can bawl on winning if he yodels "De it new!" He has made a good beginning to wear laurels on his brow. Do not ever start reviling when things have not gone your way; rather murmur: "Keep on smiling," and you're sure to win the day. Yes, as on life's way you're flitting, it will shorten many a verse if you'll stick right with your knitting" and remember "safety first!"

Her Own Way

Tale of a Young Girl's Struggle in New York

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

THE man's arms were about the girl; her head was on his shoulder.

While Helen paused, astounded, the nurse lifted her arms and put them about the man's neck.

"I love you dearly, dearly!" Helen heard her say. "You are the only thing in the world that I really love."

Without waiting to hear more, Helen retreated, closing the living room door as softly as she opened it. She felt guilty, as if she had intruded upon a scene that was too sacred for any eyes except those that she actors.

Stood Irresolute

She was thinking fast. Elizabeth had not expected her home yet; she had not heard her enter.

She would be chagrined were she to suspect that Helen had witnessed the affectionate scene between herself and the man to whom she was engaged.

That Elizabeth Mayo and Luther Willard were engaged the country girl did not doubt. That they had only this evening become engaged seemed likely.

For, of course, Elizabeth would have confided in her, Helen, if her betrothal had occurred even twenty-four hours ago.

Helen's heart beat high in sympathy as she appreciated that at last Elizabeth had fallen in love. Then she recalled her friend's remarks about her determination to marry only a man who had money—even if she did not care for him.

How reconcile that statement with what Helen had just seen?

But, of course, Elizabeth had not meant that foolish statement! She had uttered it to conceal from her companion the fact that she was losing her heart to Luther Willard.

For Luther Willard was a poor man with a salary barely enough to enable him to live as he wished in the style to which he had been accustomed. He was extravagant, and acknowledged that he was.

He was constantly referring to the fact that it was necessary for him to punish himself with what he termed many "lean years" in order that he might save enough money to pay for his recklessness during his "fat weeks," or periods of extravagance.

Yet Elizabeth was engaged to him!

Helen standing in the hall, smiled contentedly and comprehendingly. Her friend was, after all, not the mercenary person that she had predicted to be.

A Clever Ruse

Her mind made her presence known now, yet not surprise her hostess unduly.

With a subtlety that she flattered herself was keen she opened the outer door again, tip-toed onto the upper hall, then, with an effort to make as much racket as possible, reinserted her key in the lock and entered the apartment once more, slamming the door behind her.

"Hetty!" she called. "Where are you?"

"Here!" Elizabeth answered, and a moment later appeared in the doorway of the living-room. "Come in. Luther Willard is here. I did not expect you home so early as this. I thought you had to work late."

"Only until about seven o'clock. I did not have to stay down-town unless I wanted to. But I was glad to help Miss Dalrymple with the new consignment of goods that arrived."

She was trying to speak naturally, as if she were not aglow with sympathy with these young people who had just declared their love for each other. She could not understand how Elizabeth could appear so cool and self-possessed. Her cheeks were slightly flushed, but her manner was as composed as usual.

Nor did Willard seem particularly elated. Indeed, he looked at Helen with the genuine or assumed interest that he always showed her.

"Your boss is in luck in having you to work for her," he remarked gallantly. "I quite envy her. If I were in a position to chose an assistant you would be it, Miss Nell."

Helen laughed. So did Elizabeth, but her laugh was harsh and forced. She regarded her friend with no trace of affection in her gaze.

Again Helen recalled her former suspicion that Elizabeth resented Luther Willard's kindly remarks to the little country girl.

Well, if Elizabeth loved Willard—if she were engaged to him—perhaps it was natural that she should be slightly jealous.

Yet it was rather absurd—when the object of the jealousy was Helen Gorman, who cared nothing at all for Luther Willard.

Now, if it had been Dr. Andrew—

She checked this idea as also absurd.

"I think I will go to my room," she said, "if you two will forgive my running off as soon as I get home. But I have had a busy day, and I am tired."

"I don't if Luther will excuse you." Elizabeth rejoined rather sharply. "He always sits up and takes special notice as soon as you come in."

Only a moment ago this girl had been in Luther Willard's arms, telling him that she loved him—yet now she spoke as if she were vexed with him. It was plain that she resented her friend's inopportune arrival.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Which type are you?

Are you like No. 1 or No. 2 in the following incidents?

* * *

Two New York business men commute daily from New Jersey. No. 1 uses the ferry (free) across the Hudson to save 6 cents every morning, although the subway would take him much nearer his office, down town, and save him at least fifteen minutes.

No. 2 takes the subway uptown, and I have noticed very often that instead of stopping to get change in order to drop into the box the 6 cents additional fare charged uptown passengers, he tosses in a nickel. Tube saves him anywhere from a few seconds to a minute or more every morning.

* * *

I happen to know the business records of both men. No. 1 is extremely thrifty. He attaches great importance to saving pennies. In fact, he has always been so much concerned about little economies that he apparently hasn't had time or inclination to develop any original prospective ideas. He hasn't made any progress in years, but seems to be falling behind in the business race.

No. 2 is a younger man, who has already made quite a reputation for forcefulness and for achievement. He attaches more importance to saving a little time than to saving a little change. He figures that every time is worth more than a cent a minute, and that it is good business for him to walk in front of a nickel in order to save the extra penny when coming to business in the morning. As a matter of fact, this man's time nets him quite a few dollars every working hour.

* * *

Observation of these two men has recalled the story told of the employer who was engaging an office boy. His asked each applicant to unwrap a parcel. One lad did so and, very methodically, folded up the wrapping paper and carefully wound the string into a little hank. Another unwrapped the parcel in half the time, tossed the paper and the string into the waste basket and was ready for the next order in a jiffy.

Which of the boys would you have engaged?

* * *

I have done a lot of thinking on these two different ways of doing things with a view to arriving at a conclusion as to which is the better method. In mentally analyzing a large number of men who have achieved notable success, I find that there are examples of both types. Judging from the elaborate care John D. Rockefeller takes in his dress upon his grandchildren and other children of friends and from looking after the pennies or nickels or dimes which he gives them, I would say Mr. Rockefeller belongs to the first type. Andrew Carnegie, on the other hand, came under the second category. He concentrated upon all his associates that the saving of time was of supreme consideration, and he would spend millions of dollars in trying out costly machinery in order to install something which would do the work in a fraction less time.

* * *

My deduction is that the older generation belonging to No. 1 class, generally speaking, and that the most conspicuously successful members of the newer generation belong to the second class.

If this is so, why is it so? Many it not be that in former days the business pace was very much slower than it is now, and that it was considered more important to save small sums than to save time? In those days time was more plentiful than money.

* * *

The pace is so swift today that the saving of time is considered incalculably more important by many busy executives than the saving of trifling sums at the cost of even a little time. This attitude can be readily understood when you stop to figure what a very successful financial or business executive's time is worth to him in dollars and cents.

What does the pay of a $50,000 a year man work out per hour—that is, per working hour? A man of this calibre works, as a rule, less than fifty hours a week. At the rate of $1,000 a week, the pay of such a man amounts to $20 an hour. Therefore, if a $50,000 a year man can save one minute at the cost of a cent—or at the cost of several cents—it pays him to do it, since $20 an hour is equal to 33⅓ cents per minute. The rate would work out at considerably more than this, since the $50,000 a year men do not work every week of the year and there are a good many public holidays to be deducted.

* * *

The time of a $25,000 a year man would, of course, be worth just half as much as this, while the rate of a $5,000 a year man would be one-tenth as much as the $50,000 a year man, $2 per hour or 3⅓ cents a minute.

* * *

Here's another consideration; the saving of time gives a person more time to accomplish things and, after all, the real joy of living springs from doing things.

Mr. McNeel's Book

"Boating the Stock Market," by B. W. McNeel, financial editor of the Boston Herald, is interesting and instructive to the investor or speculator in stocks, as well as to the vast number of other persons who should, for public good, be informed on the subject if so lucidly treats. The author, who has a large daily following of readers, comprehensively covers a big field in a book of twenty-five bright, well written chapters. The cover design by B. Morgan Dennis depicts a lamb looking at a ticker and in a stroke of genius.

MEXICAN PETE KEPT UNDER PRESSURE

Bear Drive Against Doheny Leader Is Persistent; Steels and Motors Down

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks ratified on the New York at noon, but were above the lowest level of the morning. Mexican Petroleum continued to be the main objective of the bear track. It was off five points at the forenoon high and by mid-day had recovered half of the decline. Pan American was not active and recorded a similar gain, a partial recovery in the second hour.

Small losses were the rule for steels and motors, with Baldwin at the weakest of the latter. Bethlehem B showed the largest loss among steels. Rails were steady and a number showed gains. Southern Pacific advancing more than a point.

The market was active in the first hour, when trading was estimated at 150,000 shares. It was quiet later. Call money opened at 6 per cent. For-eign exchange rates were firmer.

DECLINED AT OPENING

While the list was irregular as to price changes at the opening, the majority, including the leaders, and the market sold off quickly. In fact, it had the same kind of a start as yesterday, when the bear drive launched the feature. Four times in succession there was driven to more than four points, Mexican Petroleum and U. S. Rubber receiving the major attention. It was among the most active issues and rallied after a small decline and soon showed nearly two points gain.

SOME STRONG SPOTS.

Most stocks lost but little ground and there were some strong spots. Chicago Pneumatic Tool made a good gain and Virginia Carolina Chemical preferred advanced more than five points on its first sale. The common stock of this fertilizer company, which has no bonds or debt, could be added Car and Foundry. Present weakness of stocks is attributed to the recommendations at Washington to impose a duty on sugar. Democrats are making an opportunity to attack Doheny, issuing the bad break in the price of Mexican Petroleum as the most pressing influence upon the whole street. Regarding this bear drive a financial publication says: "The result of a canvass made among some of the leading commission houses—eight in number—showed their joint net position on Wednesday morning to have been long of 25,000 shares. It simply adds to the mystery, surrounding the market movement of this stock in the face of the supposedly huge holdings and small floating supply."

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The proposed duty on crude and fuel oils in the tariff bill submitted to the House Wednesday was sufficient explanation for the action of Thursday's market. All of the Mexican and south American oils were adversely affected, and the speculative operations in Mexican Petroleum were reversed with even greater intensity. Mexican Petroleum opened at 158, a decline of four points from Wednesday's eight points. It fell to par very shortly, rallied feebly and then broke to 98¾. Pan-American opened with broke eight points. General Asphalt five and even the domestic oils, which would be favorably affected by the proposed duty and which were strong in the early trading, finally fell to weakness.

One feature which was overlooked in the excitement attending the deals in oil shares was what the sugar-trade claims as a bounty provision for American sugar refiners. In this schedule it is provided that any refiner or manufacturer in this country may for every pound of sugar manufactured here import two pounds and pay only three-fourths of the regular duty on it. Island Creek receded a point but quickly recovered part of the loss.

Small gains were made by Isle Royale, New Cornelia, U. S. Smelting, National Lead, Utah Copper, Kelly & Davis. Fractional declines were suffered by Calumet & Arizona, Yellow Cab, Consolidated Cigar, Swift & Company and Waltham Watch.

CURB WAS DULL.

The Curb was irregular in price movement at the opening and afternoon and was also as dull during this morning as it has been this week. Among those most actively traded in were Montana, Crystal and Ruby. At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was off 4 cents at 15 cents, and Ruby unchanged at 21 cents. Verde Minex was up 1 cent at 21 cents. Ruby had lost at opening gain.

Dr. Malone Says They Are Taking the Livelihood From Practising Physicians

Dr. Charles Malone of No. 46 St. John street, Jamaica Plain, is author of an article in the Boston Surgical and Medical Journal criticising Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and similar institutions for the scale on which they are conducting clinics.

He says they are taking the livelihood from practising physicians and calls the clinics "a nuisance." Dr. Malone cites the Boston Dispensary night clinic. He says many who attend it could afford to pay a regular practising ef-

HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF MOTION PICTURES

By FRIEDA DAVIS

JESSE LASKY was as pleased with the roars of the all-star production of "The Affairs of Anatol," the Cecil DeMille feature, and with the all-star picture being made at the Long Island studio by George Fitzmaurice, "Peter Ibbetson," that he will arrange for another to be made in Hollywood.

The first picture includes such players as Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Julia Faye, Agnes Ayres and Theodora Kosloff, while the latter is being filmed with Wallace Reid, Elsie Ferguson, Elliott Dexter and Montagu Love.

This new film will be called "The Ramona's End" and was written by Laura Moon. Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter will constitute the starring element, while Sam Wood will direct.

DAVID WARFIELD JOINS RANKS.

STAGE stars are realizing more and more the importance of being in the movies. Today comes the announcement that David Warfield, long the idol of theatregoers, has signed up to film some of his famous successes for Metro.

"The Music Master" will be the first production made by Warfield, to be filmed sometime during the coming year. It will probably be made on the East coast, as Mr. Warfield will appear on Broadway in a revival of "The Return of Peter Grimm," and later will give his first Shakespearean portrayal, that of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice."

BESSIE LOVE, STUDENT

SEVERAL years ago Bessie Love startled the film colony in California by going back to the Los Angeles High School to finish her four-year course there which had been interrupted by a chance to star in the movies. She finished the work without letting up in her film activities, and was graduated with honors.

Now she's going to do it again. She has enrolled as a student in drama, English literature and psychology at a Los Angeles university for the Summer course and will make pictures between study hours.

C. H." AND MILDRED HARRIS.

THERE are some who think the work of a movie player is a nonchalant affair that takes about two hours a day—any two hours the player thinks most convenient. Listen to this tale of the first day Mildred Harris worked under Cecil De Mille's direction.

Mr. DeMille called an 11 o'clock meeting of his entire staff, writers, players and technical workers. At 11 they were all there—but Miss Harris, one of his stars. At 11:30, the situation remained the same—with the exception of "C. H." disposition. That was different.

At quarter of twelve in walked Miss Harris. Everything was very quiet. Then, very politely, the director spoke:

"Miss Harris," he began, "I have directed stars—great and small—for eight years. Of those you are first to be late for one of my calls. You owe, to this entire company as well as to me, an abject apology. Your time may not be valuable.

MILDRED HARRIS

Ours is." Miss Harris sniffed. "I can suit myself. You should allow time enough for accidents to order a taxi. Hereafter each minute you are late you lend you ten dollars. Today's delay, at that rate, would net the company $450."

FRANK KEENAN ON STAGE.

WHEN Frank Keenan opened in Hollywood last week in "Rip Van Winkle," in which he is starring on the stage, he was given a great ovation. Most of filmland was on hand to welcome him.

When he finishes his Los Angeles engagement, he will take the piece on tour before he again takes up screen work.

GREER PLAYS FOR NOAH BEERY

NOAH BEERY'S outdoor theatre, which is one of the many features of his Los Angeles home, will be the scene of something entirely new in the movie circles. He will sponsor a series of Greek plays which will be presented by some of Hollywood's most famous stars. Mr. Beery will both act and direct.

ASK FUNDS TO SAVE INFANTS

Baby Hygiene Association Appeals to Public for Cash to Carry on Work

The Baby Hygiene Association of Boston is making an appeal for funds to carry on its work among the babies of the city's poor.

The association has grown to more than sixty times its original size since its organization in 1909 and the demand for further increases in its work is tremendous, according to statements by Dr. Richard M. Smith, chairman of the board of trustees, and Miss Winifred Strand, R. N., director.

It is pointed out by physicians and those in a position to know that more than 10 per cent, 100 babies out of every thousand born in Boston, die before they are a year old.

ASK FUNDS TO SAVE INFANTS

Baby Hygiene Association Appeals to Public for Cash to Carry on Work

The Baby Hygiene Association of Boston is making an appeal for funds to carry on its work among the babies of the city's poor.

The association has grown to more than sixty times its original size since its organization in 1909 and the demand for further increases in its work is tremendous, according to statements by Dr. Richard M. Smith, chairman of the board of trustees, and Miss Winifred Strand, R. N., director.

It is pointed out by physicians and those in a position to know that more than 10 per cent, 100 babies out of every thousand born in Boston, die before they are a year old.

Why Americans Are Barred From Russia

Recent dispatches in the foreign press, especially in the American press, commenting on the non-admission of Americans into Russia, claim that Russia is passing through a crisis and that the Soviet government desires to conceal it.

It is ridiculous to speak of a desire, or even of a possibility, to conceal anything in this manner when in Moscow at present there are about 2,000 delegates to congresses from all over the world, and when there are also in Moscow twenty-three official foreign missions, possessing diplomatic privileges, including those of cipher communication, mail and courier service, and when, moreover, the commercial representatives and trade delegations of countries which have already signed agreements with Soviet Russia come and go to and from Russia daily.

Those who invent all kinds of explanations for the non-admission of Americans should know that the time for investigation and curiosity seeking in Russia has passed and that only persons who have business to attend to in Russia are admitted. This, however, is not the case with Americans, whose government persistently presents any possibility for the re-establishment of successful business relations between the two countries.

This is a sufficient explanation of the reasons why Russia will not permit Americans seeking to investigate Russian conditions and having no other business there to enter Russia when America will not permit Russians to do the same thing in America.

It shows the attitude of our government in a most unfavorable light. When the monarchies of the world have entered upon friendly relations with Russia, we, the great democracy, still refuse to treat as a friendly government that government of peasants and workmen which has overthrown the darkest, bloodiest tyranny that the modern world has known, when we treated as a friendly government that cruel tyranny, corrupt and inefficient and degrading as it was cruel and oppressive, as if it were the purest government in the world, receiving its ambassadors and sending friendly ambassadors to its dark, ignorant, debauched, oppressing court.

We, who profess to be willing to bleed to make the world safe for democracy, what have we permitted to become of our democracy at home? We, who laid it down as a cardinal object of our fighting that the right of self-determination should be recognized by all governments of the world, what are we doing for Ireland, what are we doing for India and Egypt and China and Korea? Where in the world that self-determination is being denied are we doing anything to prove that our professions were not hypocritical?

Weeks a Practical Secretary

The more we read the statements of Secretary of War Weeks, the more we think he is going to fill the bill as Secretary of War. So far, he seems to us to be making as fine a Secretary of War as he made a poor Senator. In the war office he is representing the interests of the great majority of the country, while in the Senate he represented the small minority.

He takes a sensible, practical man's view of a cold and practical world. He understands that human nature does not change and has not changed within the range of human records, and that under similar conditions the human race does exactly the same things, no matter what the clime or what the age. He knows that conditions with respect to the causes of war, namely, the struggle for existence, the rivalry for trade, the sensitiveness of nationality, ambition, vainglory and all the things which constitute the tinder of war, exist today just as they existed in the centuries gone by, and that there is no prospect that these rivalries and vanities will disappear over night. Therefore, he knows that America's only insurance is to heed Washington's advice that "the way to maintain peace is to prepare for war."

If by the devotion of all the energy and intelligence which he possesses Secretary of War Weeks can make this nation prepare for all possible contingencies, he will some day be hailed as a great leader of his country, and not the least of those who will do him honor will be the foolish pacifists, whose blind, thoughtless worship of sententiousness would put this country where China, with her 400,000,000 helpless, starving pacifists, and India, with her 300,000,000 helpless, starving pacifists, put themselves by their blind pacifism.

The Law a Poor Job

Do Not Envy Stanchfield

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

A lawyer's job is ungrateful. John B. Stanchfield, one of the ablest, most successful American lawyers, is dead. He had great power, and nearly always won. But WHAT did he win? He left a fortune of a few millions, perhaps. What does that amount to when you are dead?

He got Harry Thaw out of jail, and he kept others out of jail that expected to go in. By a few hours' thinking he transformed a young lady, Mrs. Stillman, from a lady hunted by lawyers and much distressed into an international heroine.

But what does all that mean to him? The average lawyer, giving his energy to the quarrels and troubles of other men, has a career not to be envied. For nothing is worth while except CONSTRUCTIVE work. In constitutional and international law there is some construction, but at best it is only defining what others have done.

THE HOME AND BUSINESS

Isn't it possible that you are sticking around home too much for your own good?

It is necessary for men to get out around among men to know what is going on in the world.

It is necessary for men to mingle with other men to know what they need and most require, and think whether you can furnish what they want to the advantage of all concerned.

The man who is known, who makes himself known for his ability along any certain line, is building up success every day for himself.

Not to brag about what you can do, but to be so actually active with other men that they get to know for themselves what you can do, is the thing which you should strive for.

This is a world of keen competition, and while it may be a great deal harder for you to get yourself out evenings instead of sitting around a cozy grate with your wife, yet you may be able to furnish a cozier home scene later if you pay a little more attention to business and the doings of men in their business affairs just now.

Way to Delay Old Age

By Sir G. Sims Woodhead,
Principal of Medical Schools, Cambridge University

LONDON, July 1.—Metchnikoff said we ought to live till we are 120. I believe that if we come into the world with our full complement of health and strength; if our heredity is all right, if our parents were strong, if we have, as it were, come into the world in normal healthy conditions, we ought to live until we are a hundred.

But as a rule we do not.

There are accidents and there are various sets of conditions which interfere with the normal course of our lives. If you take, as Sir George Humphrey did, a whole series of old people you will find they lived under very good natural conditions. Sixty or seventy per cent. of them were not overactive, but they took plenty of exercise.

When they were young they were not overworked. Their mental development was carried on slowly; their physical development was also carried on comparatively slowly, but equally throughout.

They did not overeat or overdrink; they were people who were not poisoned by an excess of the various substances in the alimentary canal, in the stomach and the intestines. The bulk are of equable disposition; they are not straining excessively after things they cannot attain.

Cardinal de Salis of Venice wrote at the age of 110: "By being old when I was young I find myself very young when I am old."

TOUCHING REMINISCENCE

"Ah! It makes me sad to think that there was a time when I rode in my carriage!" remarked the tramp as he told his tale of woe to a kind-hearted woman.

"You poor man! What a comedown! And, pray, how long ago was that?" she asked, handing him a coin.

Pocketing the coin, he replied, as he walked off, "Just forty-five years ago, ma'am. I was an innocent baby then."

HUMAN NATURE.

"Pa," said little Arthur, "what is a pessimist?"

"A pessimist, my boy," said his father, "is a man who, because he cannot make both ends meet, thinks that the whole world is going wrong."

"And what is an optimist, pa?" asked the lad.

"Why, he's the man," was the reply, "who thinks that because he has a comfortable income everything in life is for the best."

A Hopeless Slave

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

YOU are here and you are wanted,
Though a waif upon life's stair;
Though the sunlit hours are haunted
With the shadowy shapes of care.
Still the Great One, the All-Seeing,
Called your spirit into being—
Gave you strength for any fate.
Since your life by Him was needed,
All your ways by Him are heeded—
You can trust and you can wait.

You can wait to know the meaning
Of the troubles sent your soul;
Of the chasms intervening
'Twixt your purpose and your goal;
Of the sorrows and the trials,
Of the silence and denials,
Ofttimes answering to your pleas;
Of the stinted sweets of pleasure,
And of pain's too generous measure—
You can wait the why of these

You are part of the Beginning,
You are parcel of Today.
When He set His world to spinning
You were flung upon your way.
When the system fails to pieces,
When this pulsing epoch ceases,
When the is becomes the was,
You will live, for you will enter
In the Great Creative Centre,
In the All-Enduring Cause.

To the Editor

North End Streets

Editor Boston American:

Conditions of sidewalks in the North End are very poor. Pedestrians must walk on the streets, because they are so narrow. The license commissioner issues licenses for the use of twelve inches of the sidewalks, but merchants often take up thirty-nine inches instead. An accident may take place at any moment on account of the many automobiles and teams that pass through the streets daily. The bad odor of food sold on the sidewalks is nauseating.

The conditions need prompt attention. Food selling on the sidewalks in front of dwelling houses, where the district is thickly populated, should not be licensed. It breeds flies and causes disease.

AMERICAN SEAMEN FOR U. S. SHIPS

By Nellie Bly

"AMERICAN SEAMEN FOR AMERICAN SHIPS."

The motto of the American Seamen's Association, recently founded in New York by myself, is resounding throughout the United States. It is heard in every corner, and is the one universal topic of conversation.

It has awakened hope in the hearts of the Americans who have followed the seas and who have been forced to struggle against discrimination; who have been compelled to live among aliens who could not speak their language and whose mode of living is repulsive and abhorrent.

These fine, brave, native-born American seamen were in despair. They had struggled against the overwhelming hordes of aliens who usurped their places. They saw day by day every post being taken by foreigners, especially Limeys. They found their societies and organizations besieged and ruled by foreigners. They realized they were being pushed gradually, but surely, out of this work.

American Flag Hoisted

To secure a position a marine engineer had to apply to a Limey port engineer. If by any chance the position was secured, then the American on board a boat had to be subject to the orders of an alien. Then the American working upon the ship had only aliens to associate with. Alone, the "Yank" had to defend his country, his rights and his work against the slurs, abuse and the malicious and even dangerous attacks of the aliens who filled the positions on American boats for the love of the American dollar, but with hate in their hearts for America and its principles.

But the slogan has gone forth, "AMERICAN SEAMEN FOR AMERICAN SHIPS." The American flag has been hoisted by these American seamen of the American Seamen's Association and it will never be hauled down again. The housecleaning has begun on the ships of the American merchant marine, on the lakes and in the rivers. The word has gone forth that Americans must be given these positions and their rights.

To Make Conditions Livable

The American Seamen's Association will not only make conditions livable for the American seamen and insure to them their rightful positions, but will encourage young Americans to become seamen. We have begun to formulate plans for the instruction of cadets.

Among those received into membership will be stewardesses, manicurists, stenographers, bellhops and elevator runners who are following the sea for their livelihood.

Do not wait till the last minute to put in your application. Applicants, wherever located, can send their applications by mail addressed to Nellie Bly, American Seamen's Association, Hotel McAlpin, New York, N. Y.

Our employment department is rapidly getting into working order and is just waiting for the strike to end to be put into effect.

It will not be very long until boats will be sailing with native-born Americans from master to messboy. The old familiar story of ninety countries being represented in a steamer's forecastle will be ancient history. In American ships there will be represented only one country, and that will be America.

Motoring With Music Box

The newest thing in simplifying the task of the automobile driver is the application of the piano-player principle to the gear shifts of the automobile.

In exterior appearance the mechanism reminds one rather more forcibly of a cash register. But when it is dissected it proves to consist essentially of a roller having a hole in its face into which, by proper manipulation, any one of five steel rods may be adjusted. Each of these rods is connected with one of the speed gears. The adjustment of one rod or another into the cylinder is effected by movement of the little thumb-lever in connection with the cash-register numbers. Instead of fumbling with hand levers and twisting them this way and that, in the manner familiar to every American motorist, all that is necessary is to shift one hand a few inches from the steering wheel and slide the thumb-lever to one figure or another, advancing from neutral to successively higher speed, or reversing the process by merely moving the lever along an arc a few inches in length.—July Hearst's International.

WORLD STILL NEEDS TO BE MADE SAFE BY LAW

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

Copyright, 1921, by Premier Syndicate, Inc.

ARE you an angel? No? Then you are not yet ready to be an anarchist.

Don't get angry. You are not being called names. Anarchism only means the state of being without rule or law.

When you are obviously ready to be self-ruled, then you can be fully trusted to be a law to yourself.

It is easy to realize how far we are from such an evolved spiritual condition when we confess our shrinking, instinctive horror of anarchistic society.

We all dread the Red Terror.

We realize how menacing not only to order but even to safety, it would be to leave life and property and all else that we hold dear to the motives and actions of men unrestrained by law and government.

The very suggestion of anarchism makes us see red—terrifies the imagination with straggly-bearded men, biting their daggers and ready to bomb mankind into social ruin.

Those are only the desperadoes of the anarchistic faith, no more truly representating the angelic philosophy of a Peter Kropotkin than a super-dreadnought battleship, bristling with hatred and destruction, represents the heavenly ethics of Jesus.

Near Anarchist

Even you are much more nearly a real anarchist than you would have been willing to believe or admit.

Your very resentment of legal restraint—not because you want to do wrong, but because you know that you can, without that, be trusted to do right—is your toward registration of progress toward idealistic anarchism.

If you took the trouble to climb over the mountains of books containing the laws and statutes of your own State, city or town, you would wonder for whom these could possibly have been enacted and compiled, since practically all of them deal with crimes, misdeeds and misdemeanors so foreign to your nature.

You did not know that you had become so good, were so nearly an angel, almost ready for anarchism? Did you?

The fewest laws are necessary where the people can be trusted most.

Government of the people, by the people, for the people is an assertion of just such spiritual progress of the race.

Means Self-Rule

Anarchism in this sense also means self-rule, the development of a people toward self-government, with minimum imposition of control or restraint through law.

Recently Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, speaking before the Society of International Law, declared that one cause of the decline in the respect for law was the multiplication of statutes.

Partly, at least, that protest is due to the pernicious activity of the very good.

A curious impatience seems to have seized these folks, no less significant or less futile than the impatient fever of revolution. Our reformers vainly seek to hasten the painfulness of men by legislation.

You can no more sanctify the world by law than you can, by war, make the world safe for democracy.

Is Within You

The Kingdom of Heaven is within You. The Democracy of Earth is within You. The Seat of Self-Government is within You.

Only the moral evolution of the people gives final authority to law.

Only to the extent that you, as an individual, approach angelhood can you become an "anarchist"—doing without law.

Only if you have become god-like enough to be your own taskmaster, and if your inner law is as strong to you as iron necessity is to others, have you the right to object to the restraint of law.

And then you will not object. But you will see that, for the rest of us at least, the world still needs to be made safe by law and by respect for law.
